

300 HURT WHEN STAND FALLS; 1 DEAD THREE KILLED IN GRADE CROSSING TRAGEDY

VICTIMS RIDING IN AUTO TRUCK STRUCK BY PASSENGER TRAIN

Blood Transfusion Used In In Effort To Save Life

Cleveland, O., Jan. 2.—A blood transfusion was made today in an effort to save the life of Verna Wintle, 16, who was injured in a grade crossing crash near here yesterday in which three persons were killed and two others injured.

The dead: Charles Wintle, 35; Charles Miller, 24 and Mrs. Matilda Miller, 53, Charles' mother.

Tom Wintle, a Cleveland fireman and brother of Verna gave his blood today in an attempt to save Verna's life.

James Miller, 54, husband of Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Bessie Wintle, 60, step-mother of Charles and Verna were injured.

The victims were en route to the Wintle home for dinner when an Erie train struck the truck in which they were riding. The Millers only recently came to this country from England.

A number of buildings cut off the vision of the left approach to the crossing.

In another accident, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Mathews and son, Trevitt miraculously escaped death when their automobile was struck and dragged 100 feet by a Lake Shore electric train.

LIMA SCHOOLS WILL BE CLOSED MONDAY

Lima, O., Jan. 2.—The public schools here will not open Monday because of poor financial conditions in the city, it was announced today.

Whether the schools will open again this year depends upon the pending decision of the appellate court early next week, in the city-county mandamus suit.

Both high schools, have sustained losses said to exceed $2,000 caused by the bursting of water-pipes. The intense cold and the lack of funds to keep fires were held responsible, it was said.

That the county courthouse will close and the entire county government come to a standstill because of financial conditions was predicted in some circles.

FOUR MEET VIOLENT DEATHS ON HOLIDAY

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 2.—Four deaths, two of them suicides were recorded in Cincinnati over New Year's day.

After writing a note to a girl who had rejected him Julius Earl Brown, 20, killed himself with a shot gun.

Loneliness resulting from the death of her father was held responsible for the suicide of Mrs. Mamie Stumps, 41, who inhaled gas fumes.

Jefferson Mau, 42, fell to his death from a fire escape at the Longview Hospital for feeble-minded here while attempting to escape.

Shirley Lewis, 32, was killed when a passenger train struck his automobile at a grade crossing. The car was hurled a hundred feet.

GENERAL HART IS CALLED BY DEATH

Washington, Jan. 2.—Major General William H. Hart, quartermaster general of the United States Army died here this morning at Walter Reed hospital.

Hart's death followed a relapse after a major operation for stomach trouble performed five weeks ago.

LEAPS FROM WINDOW AS FIRE BREAKS OUT

Cleveland, Jan. 2.—Panic stricken when fire broke out in her home early today, Mrs. Charles Lung, 56, fell from a second story window and was perhaps fatally injured.

Mrs. Lung's three daughters, who were trapped on the second floor by the flames and smoke, were carried to safety by firemen. The house was destroyed.

Little hope is held for Mrs. Lung's recovery.

CARDINAL BETTER

Brussels, Jan. 2.—The condition of Cardinal Mercier who was operated on a few days ago for ulcer of the stomach, was reported today to be slightly improved.

Renounced Throne For Love

Legation Denies Action Caused For Political Reasons—
Reported Love For Morganatic Wife Caused Him
To Spurn Princess Helen.

Berlin, Jan. 2.—Love of a beautiful woman and not the intrigues of the Rumanian court, are behind the renunciation by Rumanian Crown Prince Carol of his rights to succeed to his country's throne, according to the Rumanian legation today.

While European capitals buzzed with rumors that political intrigue had unseated Carol, the legation told the United Press flatly the renunciation was "not political."

Instead it was stated that love had led him to give up the privilege of one day ruling with Princess Helen on the throne now held by Ferdinand and Marie.

The statement seemed to put an end to reports that the impetuous officer-prince had been deposed through intrigues of Premier Bratianu, his political enemy whom hitherto Queen Marie has supported or that linked his name in the Rumanian "aviation scandal" had caused him to step down.

At the same time the legation's claim appeared to give substance to the reports that the young man had been seeking life and safety on the continent in the company of a beautiful woman — though the multiplicity and contradictory nature of these reports made it a riddle whether the "intimate love affair" was with hismorganatic wife, Zizi Lambruni, with the wife of a Rumanian officer or in the company of other women, all of whom were named.

Bucharest, Jan. 2.—Rumors were current here today that Crown Prince Carol, intends after using his renunciation as evidence of "martyrdom" by the Bratianu regime, to start a coup of his own. If he succeeds in winning sufficient support for the martyrdom it was claimed, he will set up his own government, ousting his aged father, King Ferdinand.

It is further reported that in renouncing his throne rights, Carol demanded a large money allowance and a divorce from Princess Helen whom he is reported never really to have loved.

The crown council has decided that in event of the King's death before Prince Michael, is of age, Prince Nickolai, will be made regent.

The crown prince has promised to remain away from Rumania for six years, "unless your majesty orders otherwise" (This phrase perhaps indicates the renunciation was not altogether voluntary.)

CLEVELAND IN LEAD IN NUMBER OF DEATHS FROM POISON BOOZE

Traffic Toll Also Heaviest In Fifth City Is Report

Cleveland stepped to the fore in the poison liquor deaths scoring 119 deaths for the year, an increase of 28 over 1924.

Youngstown nosed into second place with 22 poison liquor fatalities, an increase of 10 over 1924.

None was registered in Columbus, while Toledo tallied 9, a decrease of 1 under 1924.

Other cities, such as Dayton, Sandusky, Cambridge, Portsmouth, Newark, Zanesville, Tiffin, Chillicothe, Fremont, Lima, Lorain, Findlay and New Philadelphia, Bowling Green, Belleaire, Lancaster and Galena reported one or more deaths.

Cleveland likewise made the major contribution to the traffic fatalities column with 213 deaths as compared to 185 in 1924.

Columbus and Franklin Counties registered 92 against 59 in 1924; Akron 62 against 39; Youngstown 30 against 33; Toledo 9 against 73.

The marriage market boomed in some sections and tobogganed in others incomplete records making it impossible to determine whether there was an increase or loss.

The same applies to birth records although unofficial figures tended to show that births were slightly under deaths.

The number of boys and the number of girls born was about on a parity with the male infants at a slight advantage.

BRAWLS RESULT IN TWO FATALITIES

Youngstown, O., Jan. 2.—Two men are dead here, one the victim of a mysterious shooting and the other from stab wounds received during a brawl, Christmas Eve.

John Parcella, an Italian, was shot down by an unidentified gunman while on his way home from work. He died today.

Roy Bromer, who fought with a group of companions Christmas eve also died today. Three men are held for questioning.

TO HEAR BILLS

Washington, Jan. 2.—The house and senate agricultural committees will begin hearings on farm relief bills January 11 and 12 respectively.

Calls for the meetings to consider new farm legislation were issued today by Chairman Hauger of the house committee and Chairman Norris of the Senate Committee. A score of editors of farm journals who will be holding meetings here then will be first witnesses.

PROBE SLAYING

Cleveland, O., Jan. 2.—Three men were questioned here today in connection with the death of Albert Short, 26, Warrensville Farm, guard who was shot and killed following a New Year's Eve party. The man who attended the party with Short, said he shot himself accidentally during an argument with them. The gun caught in his clothing a shot, emptied to pull it, they said.

Taxi Chauffeur's Courtesy Fatal

In turning to avoid striking another car, on "Courtesy Day," James Kavanaugh's taxi plunged into an excavation in New York. He was hurt fatally, but his four passengers escaped with minor injuries.

FIVE KILLED; 25 HURT IN FIRE

Pensacola, Fla., Jan. 2.—Five men were killed and twenty-five injured in an explosion and fire at the million dollar plant of the Newport Resin and Turpentine Company here today, according to a report given to police.

With the building still burning, firemen are searching for the bodies of men believed to be in the plant. It is feared several men injured will die as a result of serious burns.

KILLED BY TRUCK

Girard, O., Jan. 2.—Girard's first traffic fatality of the year was recorded here today when J. B. Hollister, Youngstown was killed when his automobile collided with a truck. Edward Thomas, the truck driver was exonerated.

JOE STORK LOSES RACE WITH DEATH IN OHIO

The annual all-Ohio marathon between the spectre of death and Joe Stork, was brought to a close New Year's eve, the winner undetermined but with indications that mortality won by a nose.

Competing in another and equally interesting race were the Benedicts who were believed to have won easily over the divorce courts where thousands of matrimonial barges foundered.

While it is impossible, as yet, to accurately enumerate the number of births and deaths, it may be safely stated that death aggregated 71,000 and that births were a close runner up.

Poison liquor, the nondescript beverage that brought agonizing death to many and permanent impairment to others, contributed substantially to death's column.

Superseding this was the spectre of the traffic accident, the genii that struck death to hun-

ULTRA VIOLET RAYS VISIBLE TO INSECTS SCIENTISTS LEARN

Power Used as Guide To
Flowers—Say Straight
Lines Curved

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 2.—Ultra violet rays invisible to human eyes are visible to the eyes of certain insects. These insects are guided to certain flowers by the fact that these flowers reflect ultra-violet light just as all flowers reflect ordinary light. The phenomenon, one of the most interesting brought to light recently, is being studied by a group of scientists under the general direction of Dr. Frank Lutz of the American Museum of Natural History.

This fact was revealed here today at the closing session of the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Dr. Vernon Kellogg, director of the National Research Council.

Dr. Kellogg, made the announcement to illustrate the importance and the success of co-operative and organized scientific research.

The National Research Council grew out of an advisory council formed during the war for the purpose of organizing and leading direction to large scale scientific projects.

"The fields of science have been expanding to such an extent that successful investigation in the future demands proper organization and co-ordination with different men each attacking the part of a problem which they are best suited to work upon," Dr. Kellogg said.

The statement that all straight lines are really curved and that if prolonged far enough in one direction would come back forming a circle was made by Prof. James Pierpont of Yale University. He bases his statement on the Einstein theory which claims space is warped or curved.

However Dr. Pierpont says that a line would have to be prolonged for eighteen quintillions of miles to complete the circle. Discovery of a new race of prehistoric men in America, was announced by Dr. E. N. Renaud, professor of anthropology at the university of Denver. Prehistoric Indian skulls from the southwestern part of the United States are of two different types corresponding to two distinct cultures, he said.

ELEPHANTS STIR UP BROADWAY

Pochyderms Cinch Never Again Pledges In
New York

New York, Jan. 2.—Smeared with blue, green and red paint, three elephants frightened back-stage at a theater in which they were performing, ran amuck here last night and brought new forces to the ragged pledges "never again" which revelers had taken only a few hours before.

With a small mob following in their wake, the three pachyderms—Jeannie, Carrie and Baby Joe—smashed a police diver after ignoring the signals of traffic policeman Seltzer, who on-lookers say, wasn't a bit insistent.

Turning into the West 123rd police station the three lumbering animals crashed into a table at which Lieut. George Renssaler, and a dozen reserves were playing checkers. Exit thirteen policemen.

Before Jeannie, Carrie and Baby Joe could do further damage, George Wilkins, in charge of the animal act arrived and after a few words to the ramping beasts they followed him meekly into the street and back to the theater.

PAIR ARRESTED IN PROBE OF MURDER

Cleveland, O., Jan. 2.—A man and woman, whose names were withheld were under arrest here today in connection with the death of George Grzarch, who died a few hours after being found in a yard, unconscious.

Both have confessed, according to the police, that they killed Grzarch when he persisted in forcing his attentions upon the woman.

Grzarch was felled with a heavy wooden instrument and was stabbed, police declared.

NURSE IS SUICIDE

Columbus, Jan. 2.—Miss Marie Anderson, 24, a nurse died here today from the effects of poison swallowed at the home of her brother, H. W. Anderson.

ISSUE BANK CALLS

Washington, Jan. 2.—Comptroller of the Currency McIntosh today issued a call for the condition of all national banks as of Dec. 31.

Columbus, O., Jan. 2.—A call for the condition of state banks as of December 31, was issued today by State Superintendent of Banking H. E. Scott.

CAPTURE WOMEN

London, Jan. 2.—It was reported here today that two American women, missionaries had been kidnapped at Pouchow An, P. China and listed as missing three weeks.

Conscience Drives Killer to Confess

When Binney Carey was murdered in a box car in Newark, N. J., 14 years ago, Edward Johnson (above) was arrested on suspicion, but released because of insufficient evidence. Now Johnson, after a 14-year battle with conscience is in the Newark jail, having finally confessed to the crime.

ATLANTIC CROSSED IN SECOND FRACTION IN BROADCAST TEST

Program Received In Maine
and Returned To England

New York, Jan. 2.—Experiment of far reaching importance in attempts to span the world by radio was partially successful last night when music broadcast from Great Britain was picked up here and re-broadcast back across the Atlantic in one thirty-second of a second.

Nine of the largest radio stations in the United States had combined to make the experiment successful. Like wise scientists had gathered at stations in Ceylon, Peru, Brazil, Havana, Japan and the Hawaiian Islands to record details of the test.

The music was from Ciro's and Convent Garden in London, broadcast from station 5XX in Davenport on a 1600 meter wave length. It was received first at Belfast, Me., and sent to the Radio Corporation of America at an Cortlandt Park here on a 70 meter wave and from there to WJZ in Aeolian Hall.

It was then re-broadcast. Soon afterward messages arrived from London saying that while strong static interfered with its clarity the music had been caught there. Eight stations in the United States which had cooperated in the experiment also broadcast the music and messages which poured in from the middle and southwest and Pacific coast indicated the music had been generally heard in those sections.

Word was received from Buenos Aires and Havana that it had been heard there and an unverified message from Paris said the music had been reached there and had been re-broadcast again on a different wave.

ISADORA DUNCAN IS SAD AFTER SUICIDE OF POET-HUSBAND

Nice, France, Jan. 2.—If Isadora Duncan, dancer, follows her Russian poet husband, Serge Yassensin in suicide it will be "in protest against the rottenness of the world" she told the United Press in an interview today.

Isadora spoke of Serge's suicide with bitterness.

"America, she said, "will some day pay for its treatment of me. All my life has been spent unselfishly and now the press laughs at my husband's death."

"Serge was a Russian and when Russians drink they break furniture. But show me any great poet, except Goethe, who had no vice. America does not know Serge."

"I was not divorced from him for I was not married to him except under the soviet scheme which is the best and most natural."

"I am a very much maligned woman, but pure of heart. Serge too, was maligned as a Russian poet. I tried to save him from himself. Now the world laughs while I cry."

Serge Yassensin committed suicide a few days ago, leaving a poem written in his own blood.

ISSUE BANK CALLS

Washington, Jan. 2.—Comptroller of the Currency McIntosh today issued a call for the condition of all national banks as of Dec. 31.

Columbus, O., Jan. 2.—A call for the condition of state banks as of December 31, was issued today by State Superintendent of Banking H. E. Scott.

London, Jan. 2.—It was reported here today that two American women, missionaries had been kidnapped at Pouchow An, P. China and listed as missing three weeks.

CRASH MARS ANNUAL FESTIVAL OF ROSES DURING BIG PARADE

Church Converted Into Hospital For Victims Of Collapse.

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 2.—Death and injury marched in the glittering parade of the annual festival of Roses, annual New Year's Day festival of wealth and beauty here.

As a gay holiday crowd watched the miles-long floral pageant, a temporary grand stand, seated about 500 persons sagged, quivered and then folded up like a stack of cards.

More than 300 persons were injured, the exact number being impossible to compute because many went to their homes for treatment.

Mrs. Elsie Borice, 65, died from injuries received in the crash.

Two other fatalities resulted from the spectacle.

Mrs. C. W. Bowden, 51 fainted from excitement and fell from the parapet of a building nearby.

Mrs. Caroline Sherman, 35, died from the shock of seeing the crash of the grand stand.

At least two persons are believed to be critically injured. Among the casualties was Mrs. Montague Glass, wife of the author. Her mother and daughter also were slightly hurt.

Many of the injured came from the middle-west and east.

The collapse of the stand came without warning when the parade was well underway. Supports of the stand gave way with a groan and a tangled mass of humans was dropped through space. After police and firemen had restored order all manner of conveyances were called out to take the injured to hospitals.

The Pasadena Hospital received about 200 persons and half this number soon was allowed to go home. The Presbyterian Church across the street from the special stands was fitted out as a temporary hospital and 100 or so persons were taken there. After an hour's delay, the parade was permitted to continue. Just as the pageant neared its end a black horse threw its rider and charged through a crowd injuring two men.

MURDER ADMITTED BY WOMAN; STATES MAN ATTEMPTED ATTACK

Former Roomer Is Slain In
Forcing Attentions,
Is Said

Lorain, O., Jan. 2.—Mrs. Elizabeth Major, 25, today admitted killing George Fairvody, 30, when he broke into her home last night and attempted to attack her.

Fairvody, a former roomer in the Major home, had been ordered out by the husband, Bert Major, three months ago for alleged familiarity with his wife.

At the time Fairvody threatened Major's life and said he would return. Twice within the last two weeks, he has attempted to break into the Major home, the last time firing several shots at the husband, when he opened the door.

The husband, in fear of his life, refused to remain in the house. Mrs. Major was home when Fairvody made his third attempt to break in last night. She shot at the man hitting him twice, once in the temple and once in the back of the head as he attempted to escape.

After the shooting, Mrs. Major summoned police.

She is being held in City Jail. No charge has been drawn against her, as yet.

POLICEMAN KILLS SUSPECT IN TOLEDO

Toledo, O., Jan. 2.—Cyrus Tigemeir, address unknown, was killed and Patrolman Leo Jarzynski was wounded in a pistol battle here early today. Jarzynski said he accosted Tigemeir and an unidentified companion as the two emerged from between two houses. Tigemeir carried a crowbar, according to Jarzynski.

The officer ordered the men to raise their hands. Both fled for an automobile parked nearby, the patrolman said. On Jarzynski's second command, one of the men drew a pistol. The patrolman fired, his first shot going wild. Taking refuge behind a tree, Jarzynski shot again, this time striking Tigemeir whose companion fled.

Tigemeir pitched to the street where Jarzynski, fearing Tigemeir was attempting to dupe him, fired two more shots into the man's body. Police expressed the belief that both Tigemeir and his companion were bandits.

BEGGAR IS KILLED

Marion, O., Jan. 2.—E. E. Perryman, 70, Tulsa, Okla., was killed near here last night, while attempting to flag a traction car. A car in Perryman's pocket indicated he made his living by begging.

XENIA'S 1925 FIRE LOSS THOUGHT GREATEST IN HISTORY OF THE CITY

Xenia's fire toll during 1925 reached far greater proportions than in the preceding year both in number of alarms and total damage, and is believed to be the greatest in the history of the city, according to figures shown in the annual report submitted to city officials by Fire Chief T. B. Claire.

Fire loss mounted from $11,475 in 1924 to the high peak of $97,451.40 in 1925, the report shows. The department answered 110 alarms during the past year in comparison with but seventy-four the preceding year. Firemen responded to eighty alarms in 1923 resulting in damage estimated at $8,085.

January led the list of 1925 months in number of alarms answered with fifteen, followed by July with twelve. August was the big fire month of the year in point of loss, nine fires resulting in a loss of $39,340, with a building damage of $24,540 and contents loss of $14,800.

Firemen used 400 1-2 gallons of chemicals during the year to aid in extinguishing blazes, the report shows.

Fires that destroyed the grain elevator and warehouse of the Ervin Milling Co. with all contents January 28; twenty-nine automobiles in the storage room of the Ary Motor Sales Co. March 19, and the combination stable and garage of the Wilson En-

"NEWS TIP CONTEST" WILL START MONDAY; CONTESTANTS ON TOES

A nose for news is a newspaper term to explain that ability which qualifies a person to know immediately what information is of interest to newspaper readers and to get information complete.

THE EVENING GAZETTE and THE MORNING REPUBLICAN are going to find out how many good "news noses" there are in Greene County when they begin their "News Tip Contest" Monday.

Readers who possess first hand information they believe to be of interest to the newspapers, are asked to call the News Tip Editor, Phone 70, the minute the information comes into their possession.

Trained reporters will gather all the information necessary on the tip to make a news story, which, if it has sufficient merit, will be published in these papers. Tips that supplied the best news stories for these papers during the week will earn their givers prize awards at the end of the week.

Tips will be judged not only on their value as a news story but on promptness, number of facts contained and attention to detail. Persons who submitted the tip from which the best story of the week was obtained, will receive a $5 prize. Giver of the second best tip will receive a $2.50 prize and the five next prize winners in order will receive two tickets to the Bijou Theater, Green St.

The contest is open to every reader of THE EVENING GAZETTE and THE MORNING REPUBLICAN and is in line with the policies of these papers to give the county complete news coverage insofar as this is humanly possible.

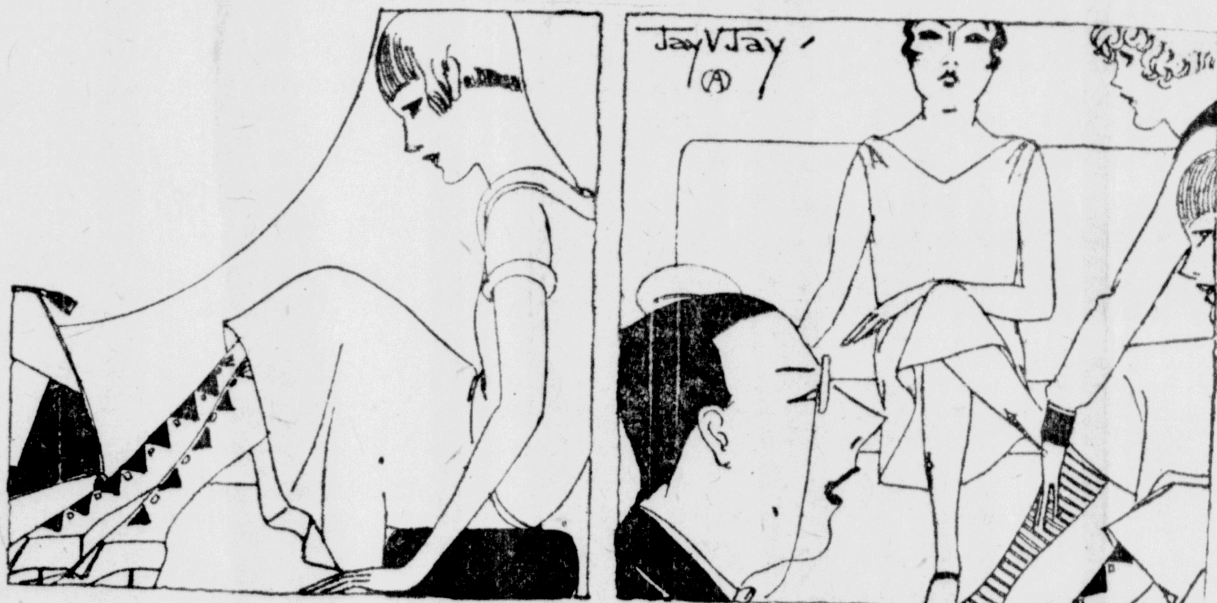

MODISH MITZI—The Goofer Has Good Taste In Hosiery

By JAY V. JAY

Mitzi wears the Goofer's gift. A sheer chignon hose with French clocks. Adelaide and Polly are admiring them. Where did Mitzi get them—oh, a Christmas gift.

Polly wears a pair of wool sports hose with horizontal stripes. They are what might be conservatively called a "wow." By the way, they were given to Polly by the Goofer for Christmas.

Adelaide wears a pair of wool sports hose, too, with a diamond pattern on them. The Goofer is responsible for this pair, too. It looks as though he was going in pretty heavily on the hosiery market. But the lady at the hosiery counter was very fair—to look upon.

And then the Goofer arrives. How can he help looking at their ankles collectively and separately. "I hear, Mitzi," says the Goofer, "that you have had to postpone announcing the winner of the doll contest for a week." "Yes, and I'm getting my friends to help me," replies Mitzi.

A SCIENTIFIC SANTA.

Under the above heading the New York Times prints the following:

"THE POST-CHRISTMAS list of the 'presents' which science has hung beside myriad chimneys, real and figurative, throughout the world is a longer one than usual this year. It has been a prosperous twelvemonth that was inaugurated scientifically by the memorable solar eclipse of January. For perhaps twenty millions of people in the United States and Canada, resident in a strip one hundred miles wide, this total eclipse was the first gift of this sort that has ever been in their visible collection of 'presents,' for there had not been, in parts of that favored zone, any such glorious occultation for more than a century. The memory of the sight of the leaping luminæ and of the gorgeous jeweled corona is one which will not soon fade; but science, undisturbed by this momentary splendor of the skies, gathered in that moment new data for its determinations as to the permanent basic laws of the universe.

"At the other end of the list is a gift which arrived at the last hour, the first report of it appearing in yesterday morning's Times, a gift that seems utterly worthless and insignificant, but that may prove to be a most important bit of evidence in the history of the evolution of life on the face of the earth. It is the fossil scale of a fish that lived, according to the report, in the earliest period of the Paleozoic era, so early that it has been christened by the name 'the dawn fish.' This primitive vertebrate has been found in the company of marine invertebrates and 'plants of a low order,' which compels the inference not only that it was associating with its inferiors in point of development (since it had the beginning of a backbone, a chorda dorsalis), but also that it existed somewhere between 50,000,000 and 100,000,000 years ago. If this one little fishscale, not larger than a match-head, is what it appears to be, and if the vertebrate creature to which it was once attached was actually in that invertebrate company so long ago, it may prove to be even more precious than the dinosaur egg or the Nebraska tooth illustrating the upward urge of a creation which has its culmination in a being that remembers the waters of the same Cambrian sea as that in which the dawn fish began its vertebrate existence.

But between these two scientific incidents, the moment's eclipse of the sun last January and the announcement yesterday of the discovery in Vermont of this single scale which Professor Howell of Princeton University has found after thirteen years of search in which he has gathered 40,000 or 50,000 fossils, there are other and many scientific events of great human interest and terrestrial consequence:

The discovery of the cosmic rays of a force a thousand times greater than the X-ray, new germs, new elements, and in fact 'vast new universes.' Specifically, the mysterious organism that causes sleeping sickness has been identified at last, and that is the first step toward the conquest of this elusive disease. Progress has been made in the study of the causes and treatment of other diseases, notably cancer.

While the parasitic boll weevil is still at large, there is a hopeful prospect that an effective means has been found of alluring this pest, so dreaded in the South, by a manufactured perfume identical with the fragrance of cotton, and so trapping and exterminating it.

"The discovery of the 'penetrating rays' to which the name of an American physicist will doubtless be given, the identification by another American of spiral nebulae, the celestial pinwheels, as 'island universes' at incomprehensibly vast distances, and the recognition of certain comets on their periodic visits have been some of the astronomical gifts. Chemists have done much to assist the science of medicine, but they have also found two of the lost chemical elements, so that now but three remain to be discovered, and have made further progress in the transmutation of one metal into another. The 'rotor ship' that has made its way at sea and the photograph that travels by wire are some of the 'toys' that have been put into Christmas stockings for the first time.

'Altogether, despite the Dayton episode, it has been an eventful, prosperous scientific year, and the gifts, of which the American association for the Advancement of Science, assembling in Kansas City tomorrow, will make a more detailed acknowledgment to the Creator, have been correspondingly generous.

BUDGET DAY WILL BE HELD THRIFT WEEK

Dayton, O., Jan. 2.—Budget Day, January 19, will be one of the biggest days of Thrift Week, January 19-23, according to Miss Edith Patterson, home budget specialist of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Cooperation of merchants in the observance of Budget Day will be enlisted by the Federation Miss Patterson said.

She pointed out that women spend 85 cents out of every dollar in the pay envelopes of the United States, and that 80 cents out of each 85 is spent over the counters of retail stores.

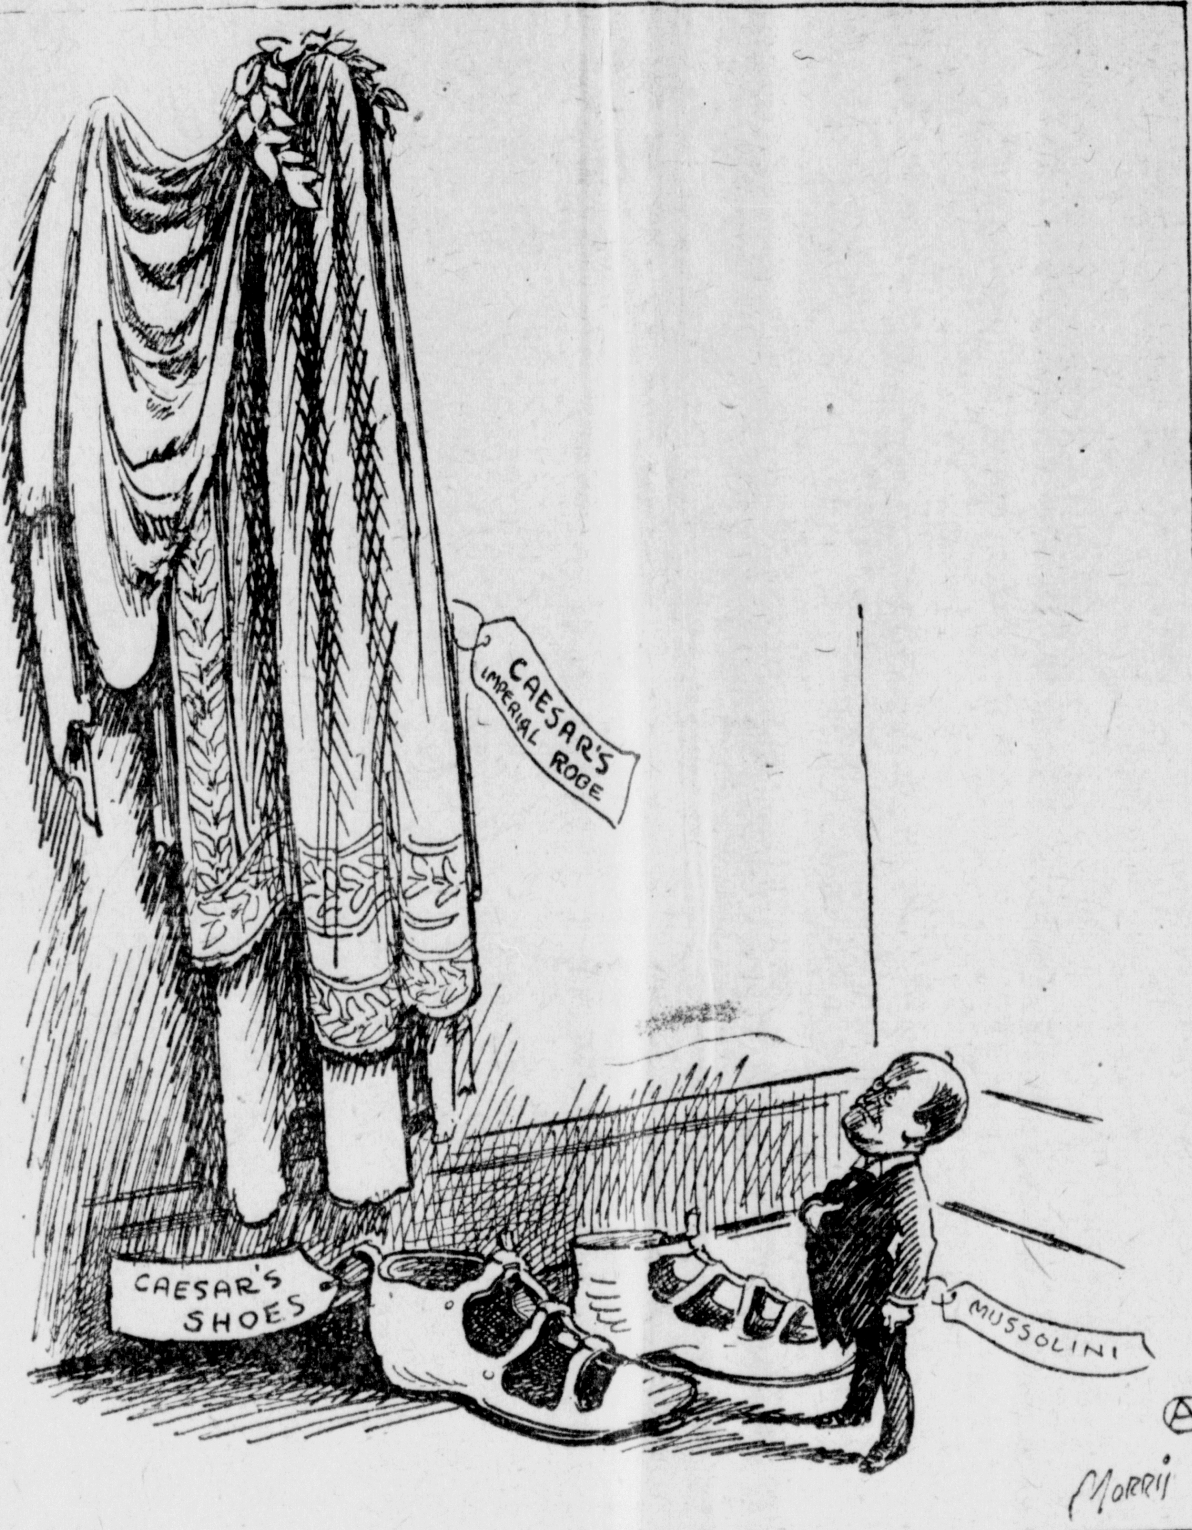

For this reason, she said, merchants should be especially interested in using this opportunity to educate their customers to spend more wisely.

OHIO FARM BUREAU MEETS IN FEBRUARY

Columbus, O., Jan. 2.—The annual meeting of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation will be held here February 1-2 in connection with Farmers' Week at Ohio State University.

At this meeting general policies for the coming year will be adopted. At present there is no new outstanding question or problem confronting the organization officials declared.

CONTRIBUTED RECIPES

Mrs. A. L.: "I thought other readers might like my Jelly Roll for guest occasions. It calls for nine eggs, but is splendid! Beat the nine egg-yolks with one and one-half cups of granulated sugar, then stir in one and one-half cups of flour which has been previously sifted with one and one-half teaspoons of baking powder. Add one-half teaspoon of vanilla extract and last, fold in the nine stiffly beaten egg-whites, beating all together for three minutes. Spread this batter in a buttered and floured baking pan (mine is 12 inches long and nine inches wide) and bake for 15 or 20 minutes. Have ready a clean wet cloth; lay the cake over it, bottom-side up, spread quickly with jelly, then roll slowly, starting from the long part of cake. Fold the wet cloth around the roll for a few minutes to keep in shape, then remove and sprinkle the cake with powdered sugar. If too expensive, you may change the recipe to six eggs, one cup of sugar, and one cup of flour mixed and sifted with one teaspoon of baking powder."

M. R.: "To make Crumbs for Coffee Cake: My recipe calls for one pound of flour, one-half pound of granulated sugar, and ground cinnamon to suit individual taste. Mix dry, then pour over it one-half pound of melted butter. Brush the coffee bread with beaten egg before putting this crumb mixture on it. This recipe makes enough for a large cake."

Mrs. W. J.: "The home woman can get the same results on the top of her coffee bread as professional baker if she first spreads a generous amount of melted or softened butter on top of the coffee bread and then sprinkles on the mixed sugar, flour and cinnamon (according to the recipe)."

Mrs. L. E. S.: "To make crumbs for coffee bread, mix one-fourth pound of butter, melted, with about four tablespoons of flour and one tablespoon of sugar. Too much sugar makes hard crumbs. Flavor with one teaspoon of ground cinnamon. After mixing, take up the mixture with clean hands, roll between the palms until it crumbles, then spread on cake, and bake. Sprinkle with powdered sugar."

FIRE LOSS SMALL

Fire Department answered the first 1925 call Friday morning at 10 o'clock when sparks falling on the roof at the home of Mrs. Durbin Wilson, W. Second St., caused slight damage.

Loss is estimated at $25. Firemen used chemicals to extinguish the blaze.

Mr. Farmer—Look At This

When problems arise on your farm and you are in doubt just what course to pursue, just what remedy to use, do you ever think of your county library? There you will find many books, each written by an expert in some line of study. Ages of farm experience and a few generations of agricultural research have given us a vast store of practical knowledge on tilling the soil and raising crops and animals. This knowledge is scattered through many agricultural journals and encyclopedias. The important facts on which the most successful farming is based are brought together in these books. These books are written for farmers and should make a popular appeal to all men engaged in farming. Notable books are: "Types and Breeds of Farm Animals," by Chas. S. Plumb, Prof. of Animal Husbandry in the College of Agriculture of Ohio State University. "Successful Farming," by Frank D. Gardner, Prof. of Agronomy in the Penn State College and Experiment Station, with chapters on special subjects by thirty-six noted authorities. "Soil Fertility and Permanence," by Cyril C. Hopkins, Prof. of Agronomy in the University of Illinois.

"Insect Pests of Farm, Garden and Orchard," by E. Dwight Sanderson, Dean of the College of Agriculture, University of West Virginia. "Principles and Practice of Poultry Culture," by John H. Robinson, Editor of "Farm Poultry." "American Horticultural Manual," by J. L. Budd, late Prof. of Horticulture in the Iowa State College of Agriculture and N. E. Hansen, Prof. in the South Dakota College of Agriculture.

"Gardening with Brains," by Henry T. Finck.

Today's Talks

THIS BODY

There is nothing so strange in this world of strange things, as this body. I watch the bodies of all people as they move here and there. I study and observe attitudes. I like to speculate as to what is going on in each body I see. That wonderful mind, so superior to so many, is the helm directly all he activities of each body.

But what a difference in environment, however, amongst these bodies. I often like to stand and study moving bodies as they surge forward in a crowd. Which are the important ones as regards human progress and worth? Who among the unknown will rise and become perhaps the honored and highly applauded?

What an instrument of power—this body! How much it means to keep it clean and full of vibrant health, so that it may respond with all its finest gifts to that which is asked or demanded of it under all conditions.

What affection we have for many bodies. How good it is to see some noble men or women walk along the street or come into our presence at times. How strongly some personalities dominate their bodies and make of them such noble works.

I like the idea of beautiful and lovely clothes if they bring out the best in the wearer.

We should have an inward reverence for these bodies of ours. They are the vehicle of our ambitions. They take us into experiences. They harbor our mysteries.

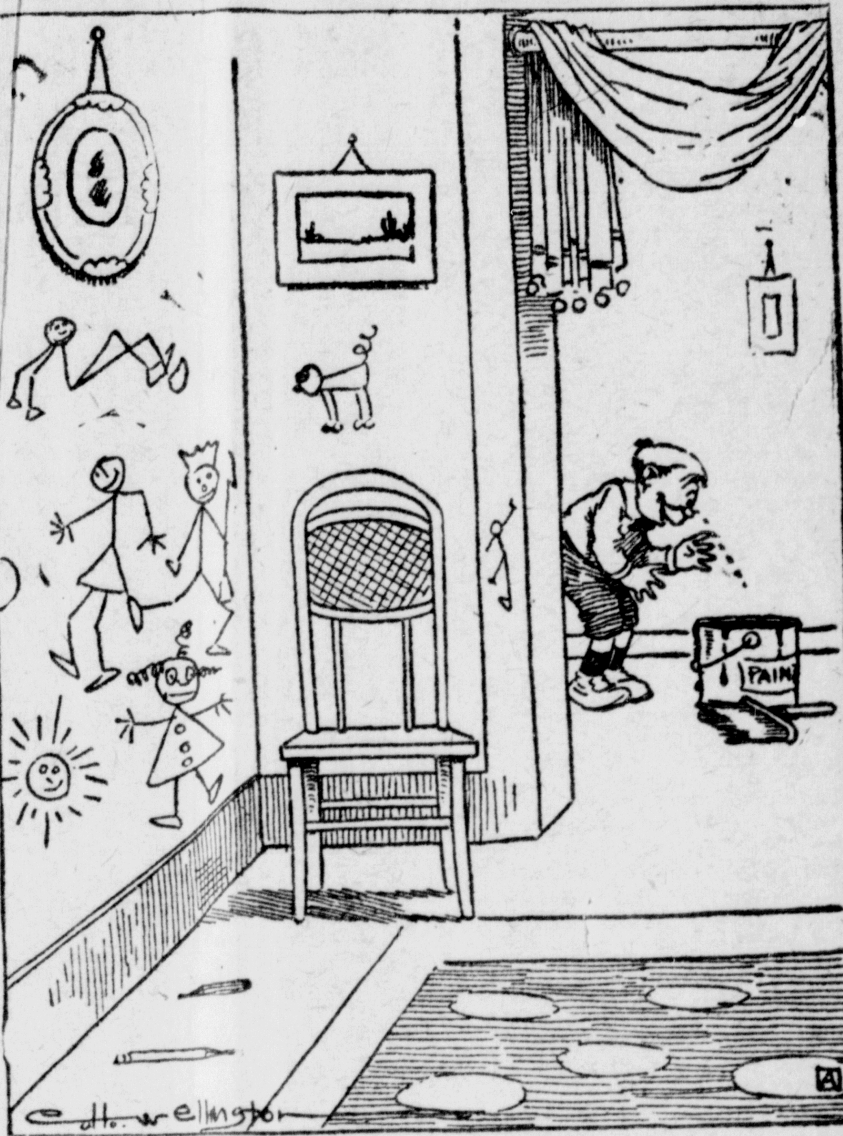

We were created "in His image."

THE WORST IS YET TO COME

Just Folks

BY EDGAR A. GUEST

THE SALESMAN COURAGEOUS

He came in as a salesman, head erect he said to me:

"I am selling here a product which I think you'd like to see. It's a handy thing for men folk, it's a useful thing for wives. It's a clever new invention made for sharpening carving knives. And I paid to him a dollar without giving it much thought. But I've learned some things about him since that article I bought."

He sold me on the merits of the thing he had to sell. Never let me guess that morning what a story he could tell: I thought him somewhat better than the common run of men. But the burden of his sorrow wasn't even hinted then. We were just two busy mortals working out our little lives, I a writer, he a salesman, of a thing for sharpening knives.

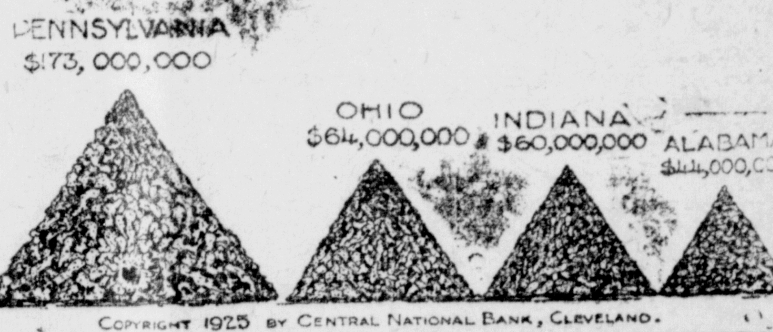

Of the losses he had suffered, not a word he spoke to me. He came to talk on business, not to ask for sympathy. He was down through grim misfortune, as I later came to learn. But was fighting for existence till the wheel of luck should turn. And was just too game to whimper any sad and sorry tale. On the merits of his product he would make or lose a sale.

So I hail that fellow's courage and I mark him as a man. One too big to ask for business on the common beggar's plan. No apology he offered for the thing he had to sell. He would not affect my judgment by the sorrows he could tell: And I give this illustration of one brave man I have met. Who would not display his heart-aches for the business he might get.

OHIO AT WORK

OHIO, LARGE COKE MAKER

Value of Output in One Year Second Only to Pennsylvania.

The production of coke is another large and essential industry in which Ohio is one of the leading states.

Information gathered and reported by the U. S. government at Washington shows that second only to Pennsylvania, Ohio in one year produces more coke than any other state in the Union.

Pennsylvania's coke production in one year is valued, in a government industrial survey, at $173,000,000. Ohio's output has a value of $64,000,000. Indiana, the third state, has a production worth $60,000,000 in one year, and Alabama's figure is $44,000,000.

Coke production goes hand in hand with the iron and steel industry, in which Ohio also is one of the leading states. However, large quantities of coke also are used in other industrial plants. The by-products of coke ovens are the basis of the growing American dye industry.

The Ohio coke industry pays wages and salaries of more than six million dollars in a year, and employs between 3,000 and 4,000 persons.

Fords Closed and Open—Buick—Dodge

The Anderson Rent-A-Car
North Whiteman Street

New York, Jan. 2—Four of the major golf titles changed hands during a most successful season in 1925 and the other four championships remained in the same hands.

Bobby Jones, perhaps the most outstanding American golfer of the season, won the national amateur championship for the second successive year and forced Willie McFarlane into a playoff in the national open.

In beating Jones in the "open," McFarlane succeeded Cyril Walker as the American champion.

Miss Glenna Collett, 1922 American woman champion, staged one of the most pleasing comebacks of the season and won back the title held in 1924 by Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd.

Jim Barnes contributed further to American prestige in foreign competition when he won the classic British open championship and replaced Walter Hagen, his brilliant American, who carried off the 1924 honors.

Robert Harris became a new champion when he succeeded E. W. E. Holderness as the British amateur champion.

Walter Hagen, considered by many qualified critics to be the greatest money player in the world, retained his championship by winning the P. G. A. title.

Miss Joyce Wethered, who was declared by Genna Collett as the finest woman golfer in the world, retained the British woman's title that she won in 1925.

Because of the heavy expenses involved there was no Walker Cup match in 1925, but the series between the British and American amateur teams are to be resumed in 1926.

Radical improvement in the college game was observed and the class has been lifted to such a prominent place by the number and ability of the competitors that it had almost a major national rating.

Fred Lamprecht, of Tulane, also a star player on the varsity eleven, won the championship and replaced Dexter Cummings, the 1923 and 1924 champion. Lamprecht was almost as good in the gridiron as he was on the links.

One of the features of the 1925 intercollegiate rowing season was the end of the Washington regime at Pennsylvanian and the continuation of Yale domination on the Thames.

Another Navy crew, almost equal to the eight that won the Olympic championship in 1924 and two titles on the Hudson, defeated Washington in the Poultneyville intercollegiate regatta after a drive that nearly pulled their hearts out to the very finish.

Along with the new coaching system of Ed Leader, swept through another great season and gave Harvard a rowing lesson on the Thames in their annual four-mile race.

Increase of interest in hockey, both amateur and professional, was also noticed late in the year.

Tex Rickard drew a crowd of 17,000 including many of New York's fashionables, into his new Garden to see his New York team open the home season of the National League schedule.

The possibility that Rickard's arena offers of seating 17,000 to 20,000 for a match stimulated the sport in both the amateur and professional classes.

Yale adopted the Rickard Garden as its home rink and about twenty-five other college games have been scheduled for the season.

The amateur players also revived a league that passed out of existence years ago because of the lack of suitable rinks.

Rickard's influence, felt in the presence of a $5,000,000 structure that can provide sufficient space for anything but an automobile race, was felt late in the year, and it no doubt will bloom every class of sport in the coming years.

ALABAMA DEFEATS WASHINGTON WITH LAST MINUTE RALLY

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 2.—Alabama Pasadena, champions of the south, became one of the ranking football teams of the season with a thrilling 20 to 19 victory over Washington, Pacific Coast champions in the Rose Bowl yesterday.

A spirited rally in the third period when the Washington defense was altered by a passing, running and blocking attack gave Alabama three touchdowns and a well earned victory.

Washington was weakened in the second period when George Wilson, All-American half back was injured and had to be carried from the field.

The morale of the team was further lowered when Pooley Hubert, the little Alabama quarterback threw a world's record forward pass of 60 yards and followed later with one for 40 yards.

The 65-yard pass wiped off the books the 57 yard heave of Brick Muller, in 1921, and the 62 yard heave of John Levi, the Haskell Indian star in 1924.

Johnny Brown, Alabama back, led the attack in the third period and scored two touchdowns in rapid succession and the third was scored by Hubert while Buckler added two points after touchdown.

Washington looked like a certain winner when the first half ended with a touchdown in each quarter by Cole and Guttersen.

THREE ARE SLIGHTLY HURT IN ACCIDENT

Unidentified occupants of an automobile bearing a 1926 license number believed to have been issued in Dayton, were bruised and slightly hurt when their auto side-swiped an approaching car near Zimmerman on the Dayton and Xenia Pike Thursday night and overturned in a ditch on the south side of the road. The machine was damaged.

The auto was occupied by three boys and three girls and no one was seriously hurt. Their names were not learned.

Officials of the Greene County Auto Club and Dayton Auto Club are investigating the accident. The auto, a Chevrolet sedan, bore license number 422,458. It was being driven toward Dayton.

SOLDIER TOSSERS TAKE EIGHTH GAME FROM PIQUA FIVE

Company L, National Guard basketball team, won its eighth victory in eleven starts this season by defeating the strong Battery E, 135 Field Artillery court five, Piqua, 36 to 13 at the O. S. and S. O. Home Army Friday night.

Fuller with six fielders and Frank Davis with five buckets, led in scoring for the local Guard quintet and Good was high individual scorer for the visiting team.

Company L will play a return game with Company F, 147 Infantry, National Guard team from Blanchester, on the Home floor next Wednesday night. Blanchester lost the first tilt 37 to 31. Lineup and summary.

SUES SCHOOL BOARD ON TRANSPORTATION BILL; COURT NEWS

Walter Hess has brought suit against the board of education of Beaver Creek Twp., Rural School District for $170, alleging the board refused to pay his bill for that amount for transportation of his two children, Harold and Marion Hess, to school during the school year of 1924-25.

The plaintiff claims the children were allowed to attend Xenia Central High School which is but three miles away, instead of the Beaver school, more than four miles distant, during the period. F. L. Johnson is attorney for the plaintiff.

ALLEGED DUE ON ACCOUNT
Claiming there is a balance due of $700 from the defendant for installing a heating plant in her residence, John North, plumber, has filed suit in Common Pleas court against Blanche Garwood, Marcus Sheup and F. L. Johnson are attorneys for the plaintiff.

WILLIAM COPE DIES HERE ON SATURDAY

William Cope, Xenia painter, died at his home, 18 Race St., Saturday morning at 9:50 o'clock. He has been afflicted for the past three years with paralysis and another attack two weeks ago resulted in his death.

Mr. Cope resided in Xenia a number of years and was well known. He is survived by three sons, Ernest and George, at home, and Carl, of this city.

The body was removed to the Need Undertaking Parlor, W. Main St., where friends can call anytime Sunday afternoon.

Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at 1:30 at Need's with interment in Woodland Cemetery.

DECEMBER POSTAL RECEIPTS INCREASE

Postal receipts at the Xenia Post Office during December 1925, augmented by the annual Christmas deluge of mail matter, showed a substantial increase over the figures for the corresponding month in 1924, according to the monthly report prepared by Postmaster C. S. Frazer.

Receipts during December, 1925, amounted to $6,300 as compared with receipts during the same month the preceding year totalling $6,015, an increase of $285.

RIEDEL APPEALS FROM MANDAMUS

Columbus, O., Jan. 2.—Vernon M. Riegel, state director of education will appeal to the higher court from the mandamus issued against him by Judge C. L. Newcomer of Williams County, ordering the assessment of a special levy to finance the re-opening of eight penniless township schools.

Riegel denied Judge Newcomer's charge that he had been negligent and asserted he performed his duty as required by law and would continue to do so until the law had been changed.

"The whole question involved," Riegel declared, "is whether the Northwest township school district, where the schools are closed, is a state aid district.

Self Preservation

"Bankers see 1926 outlook from optimistic viewpoint," said a head in this paper yesterday. Cashiers of three Xenia banks sounded an optimistic keynote when asked to give opinions on business prospects for the year just beginning.

In making these predictions the bankers took into consideration all the influences that play upon the business and commercial life of Xenia. Chief among these is the agricultural situation. Greene County is so largely an agricultural county that the prosperity of the farmers or the lack of it, visibly affects the business situation. Xenia, as the county sea, the geographical center and the largest community, is the natural trading center.

If this trading area suffers then Xenia business must suffer for if the business is hindered at the source its effect is bound to be felt. This makes practice of the theory of self-preservation a necessity.

The snail, when attacked, withdraws within its shell. All nature is equipped to defend itself and any community must equip itself likewise resist the forces that assail it.

Xenia can accomplish a manner of self-preservation by withdrawing within itself similar to the methods of the snail. This city claims the residence for more than 10,000 people without resorting to exaggeration. These people, by using self-preserving methods, can repel the advances of poor business conditions outside the corporation line.

Ten thousand people conserving their interests and those of their neighbor by an interchange of business among themselves can keep a community alive when assailing conditions reach a most poignant state.

If all were united in a common bond to deal with each other for the commodities they desire, this community would not feel the depression that may exist outside its limits. In other words practice of that over-worked injunction "co-operation" and use of that homely warning "buy at home" will form the shell that will protect Xenia from the ravages of bad business conditions.

KENDRICK COMBINES BEST IN BUILDING

One might say a "house" is judged by the exterior and a "home" by the interior. Many a residence, has every detail of beauty when viewed from without but when on the inside, the arrangement or furnishings entirely spoil the entire effect.

Houses designed by J. W. Kendrick are planned for both the outside and inside beauty. They hold that elusive detail called "charm" and the arrangement lends to proper furnishing and the making of an ideal place of living.

Mr. Kendrick has had several years experience in designing and building houses that appeal to everyone. He combines details that give a "different" touch to the design of the house and simple, liveable arrangements that lend admirably to making the "house" a "home."

MRS. CHARLES DAVIS BUR-TEX RUG AGENT

Bur-Tex rugs, for which Mrs. Charles A. Davis, 13 N. Galloway St., has the agency, is a new type of rug, establishing a new standard. They have more body than you would expect in any but the highest priced rugs. They always hold their shape.

You will have no trouble with curling corners or bucking edges on Bur-Tex rugs. The patented process of weaving together soft material between two piles of jute prevents curling, for much the same reason that ply-wood or veneer panels in doors or table tops resist warping.

The manner in which Bur-Tex rugs stand wear under rigid test is proof of their remarkable durability. You will find a Bur-Tex rug suitably designed for any room in your home. See Mrs. Davis about their fine points to-day—or at least tomorrow.

KANY MASTER TAILOR OF BEST MADE CLOTH

While every method is being thought of to save time and at the same time have as good results in the business world of today, there has been one result of hand labor that still stands in excellence. That is the tailor-made garment.

The most popular styles are recognized to be tailor-made, since they can be adapted to the large number of needs and withstand service and wear. Not only is the style of the garment more attractive but clothes that are tailor-made withstand the years as no other.

Jacob Kany has maintained a tailoring shop in Xenia a number of years and is recognized as being a finished master in the art. Men, who take pride in their appearance and desire the best for their money, have patronized Mr. Kany through the years and other people are daily realizing the value of the tailor-made garment.

"The Bread and Butter Wife," Violet Dare's enthralling serial of modern married life, began in this paper during the holidays when many people were too busy to read the opening installments. Begin to read it now and then follow the matrimonial venture of Miss Dare's very human characters in this paper daily.

I DAY DREAMS

THEY say he's worth forty millions," said Janet Stewart, looking up from her notebook at the man who had just been dictating to her. Sally Lee, at the next desk, shrugged her shoulders and laughed, but she too looked up from her typewriter and watched the big, burly man who was walking to the other end of the mezzanine floor.

"He can't buy some of the things we've got, even though he has got forty millions," she retorted. "Of course, he's got some of the best suits in this hotel, and all that, but yesterday when the tea dance was going on I saw him watching the people who were dancing, and he looked absolutely envious. He can't dance, even if he has got forty millions. You should have seen him when he tried. Francisca had to dance with him, of course, when he asked her; that's what she gets for being a professional. But you never have to take another letter—breakfast in bed every day—as many limousines as you wanted."

"Now, you listen to me!" Sally whirled around to face her. "You'd better appreciate what you've got or you'll lose it! Look at the girls who'd give anything to be the public stenographer in a hotel like this! Look at the tips we get, even though our salary isn't twenty-five a week. Look at the theater passes. And look at the invitations to dinner and supper and dance clubs we get."

"Yet, but we can't accept 'em," retorted Janet. "I'm sick of this job. Oh, you're all right; you're in love with Tom and you think the world's all moonlight and honeysuckle."

"But Tom and I can't afford to get married," said Sally. "Oh, well, everything'll turn out all right. Did you hear that maybe we'll be sent down to the company's hotel at Miami this winter? Or perhaps to the one they're just building in Atlantic City?"

"Not that we'd have any clothes to wear—or any different kind of time—if we did go," answered Janet. "Oh, well, I'm going to finish that old chump's letters, and then I'm going down to the grill room and order the most expensive luncheon I can think of. No Automat or lunch room for me today. I'm too blue!"

Sally shrugged her shoulders again and turned back to her typewriter. She looked very pretty as she sat there working; her charming little face was very earnest, her blue eyes' expression very serious, yet she looked, younger than her eighteen years. The Diplomat Hotel chain was famous for the perfection of its appointments, and even its public stenographers were included in that perfection. They must be ladylike, pretty, well dressed.

Sally's black satin frock, severely plain save for its white collar and cuffs, made her blonde hair and fair skin look lighter than ever. Her delicate features and slender, aristocratic hands showed that she came of a good family; they spoke of it where Sally, accustomed for three years now to earning her living, never did.

She finished her work and hurried out to luncheon in a tea room near the hotel, where, over her salad and tea, she could dream of her hopes for the future.

They centered around Tom, of course; big, broad shouldered, and to whom she'd been engaged for a year now. Her hope chest was more than full, and she'd bought some things for the apartment they would have just as soon as Tom could make a little more money.

Tom was a real estate salesman. If only he could swing just one big deal they'd get married. Sally drew a long breath of delight. And yet—she'd have to stop working when they married. Tom was firm about that.

Sally loved her work. She loved the bustle and confusion of the big hotel, loved her corner of the mezzanine floor, from which she could look down into the lobby, and over to the entrance of the big, mirror-walled room where the tea dances were held.

It was thrilling to watch people arriving from out of town, sometimes with foreign labels on the luggage that a porter carried for them. It was thrilling to watch pretty dressed girls and young men saunter in to luncheon, or to tea. Sometimes Sally slipped away from her desk and went down into the lobby, and to a corner from which she could watch the famous professionals, Francisca and Jerome, when they did the tango and waltz for which they were famous.

Sally loved to dance. She and Tom went to some of the cheaper cafes occasionally and danced all night, when they had money.

to save their money. She went back to her desk wishing that she could dance with Jerome just once, never suspecting how soon she would be doing that very thing.

II—A WISH COME TRUE

BACK in her corner of the mezzanine floor again, Sally went to work. One of the things she liked about working in the big hotel was the variety in the letters that were dictated to her. Men from all over the country, and from Europe as well, engaged in all kinds of work, came to her with their letters and reports and contracts, and she felt that she had a little glimpse of their lives as she took down their dictation. She worked hard for several hours, to get out some letters that had been given her that morning. All about her the great hotel buzzed and hummed. Men and girls met each other in the little alcoves strung along the mezzanine; bell boys sauntered past, packing various guests in drunks, lazy voices; one of the switchboard girls, just off duty, paused for a chat before she went home.

Finally, about half past four, when Sally's back was beginning to ache and she was wishing for a rest, the music down in the Gold Room began, and she leaned back for a moment to listen to the lilting fox trot that it played. "What I wouldn't give for a dance!" she exclaimed, tilting as far back as she could in her chair. "Well, what would you give?" It was Jerome, the professional dancer on his way down to the gold room who asked the question. She glanced up and blushed furiously at the very roots of her yellow hair.

"Almost anything," she answered, after a moment. "I love to dance."

"All right—come on!" As she looked up at him, not knowing what he meant, he caught hold of her hand and drew her to her feet. One arm was placed lightly around her waist, and they began to dance.

Sally laughed delightedly. The music came to them from below, softly, magically. The scent of flowers was heavy in the air, from a bowl of roses that stood on a table nearby. Jerome danced perfectly, as if he were dancing with a professional. He was a very handsome man—his dancing was perfect.

"You dance remarkably well," he told her, when the music ceased and they stopped. "I'm amazed."

"I've always loved to dance, loved it better than anything else," she told him. "Thank you so much for that fox trot."

"I wish that we might have more of it," he answered, and bowed and went away.

Sally was glad that Janet was not there to see her. Janet would have criticized her for dancing with Jerome. She and Sally had talked about him, about his extravagant, foreign manner, his looks—he was unusually handsome—his dancing.

"Perhaps I shouldn't have done it," Sally told herself thoughtfully. Tom wouldn't like it, she knew. Tom had seen Jerome once, when he dropped into the hotel to call for Sally, and had told Sally he didn't want her to have anything to do with him.

"But he's perfectly nice, and always very polite to me," she had said. "When I take letters for him, to people who want him to dance at their parties, he's always awfully pleasant."

"I don't care; he's not the kind of man you ought to have anything to do with," Tom had insisted. And Sally had not argued with him. In imagination she followed Jerome down to the Gold Room. Francisca would be there, charming to look at in her lovely little afternoon frock of pale gray, and her gray slippers and stockings. One of the smartest modistes in town clothes Francisca for nothing, because it was such a good advertisement to have the little dancer wearing her creations.

What fun it would be to be Francisca! To dance Sally through life, beautifully dressed, meeting charming people, getting lots of money for just having a good time! Francisca lived there at the hotel, in a pretty furnished suite. She had a car, beautifully appointed, of her own. Wealthy people entertained her; young men were always hanging around her. What fun to do all that, instead of bending over a typewriter all day long, taking letters, going home on the subway in the rain or snow or sleet or sticky hot weather, to a room in a boarding house.

Sally walked over to the edge of the mezzanine floor again, and looked down toward the entrance to the Gold Room. Francisca was just arriving, running up the three shallow steps that led to the entrance.

Jerome was at her side in an instant; so were several other men. She was lifted to her feet, and crumpled down in Jerome's arms, with a cry of pain that came clearly to Sally's ears. "It's my ankle," she sobbed. "Oh, have I broken it?" Her cry was one of true prophecy.

III—A GLIMPSE OF FAIRYLAND

FIFTEEN minutes after the accident, Jerome came running to Sally's corner. "Francisca has broken her ankle," he exclaimed. "She won't be able to dance for months. And I've got to have someone in the Gold Room for the evening. You may give me a very important engagement for the summer. Will you dance with me?"

"I?" cried Sally in amazement. "Yes, you can do it; I'll show you just a few steps that you ought to know, and for the rest, you can dance as you did with me early this afternoon."

"But my clothes!" Sally glanced down at her simple black satin frock. "Run down to that specialty shop that's right next door and get a very pretty lace collar and cuff set; the one you have is too simple. And a smart black, very small, and very sheer, flesh-colored stockings—wait, I'll go with you."

"Can't that other girl take care of it?" Jerome glanced toward Janet, who sat open-mouthed, listening. "The manager will think it is all right, I am sure. Come!"

Together they hurried down to the little shop, where Jerome selected a deep collar and wide cuffs of beautiful lace, and the woman in charge of the shop pinned them on with small gold pins. The black hat which he chose, drawing it down himself over Sally's yellow hair, was perfectly plain, with only two small, flat flowers for trimming.

While she changed her own stockings for those he picked out, he went to the florist's shop in the lobby of the hotel and bought some orchids, which she pinned to the shoulder of her dress. "Now—you look very lovely; a bit of rouge on the lips—now, that is perfect! Come!"

Sally went, wondering what Tom would say if he knew, wondering how before a crowd of people and dance as the partner of the great Jerome. He was famous in Europe as well as in America; princesses had danced with him. How could she—

"Now, don't be afraid!" Pausing in the doorway, Jerome had signaled to the leader of the orchestra, and during the intermission. The music began again, lilting, swaying. And Sally found herself swaying out across the polished floor with him, feeling that she was being borne along on the flower-scented air.

She could hear the comments of the people seated at tables placed along the edge of the floor. "Isn't she sweet? I didn't know he had a new partner."

"What a pretty girl! Jerome's so temperamental—I suppose he and Francisca had a row."

"Look—look! She's lovely!" They danced again, and then again. Between times, when the other people were dancing, Jerome took Sally to a vacant private dining room and taught her some new steps, making her practice them again and again.

"You are so intelligent—you learn so quickly," he exclaimed. Not like Francisca, I have to show her over and over."

When the tea dance was over he insisted that Sally dance with him that evening, at the supper hour at the hotel, when the Gold Room at the Diplomat was again crowded.

"You will do me such a great favor; surely you will be so kind," he urged. "Well—there's no reason why I shouldn't. Tom was the only person who cared what she did, and he was going to work that evening. She'd have to go home to her dreary boarding house and spend the evening there alone or she could stay in this enchanted place, and dance with Jerome again and be applauded, and have a beautiful time."

"All right—I'll stay," she told him breathlessly. One of Francisca's frocks was selected for her, and one of the hotel maids altered it to fit her. Jerome dashed out to the man who made Francisca's slippers, and found that some which he had in stock would fit Sally.

She was given a room, where she dressed, and then she dined with Jerome, and afterward practiced with him.

IV—A LOVER'S QUARREL

SEEMING Tom standing there, glowering like some suddenly having someone throw a bucketful of cold water over her.

"A friend of yours?" Jerome asked casually, pretending not to notice her nervousness. "My fiancée," Sally murmured, and Jerome just smiled understandingly as he said, "And he is very jealous. Isn't it so? But you look so enchanted tonight, he could not be displeased with you. And to him to come in and see what we can do to make you and leave you two to talk. Good luck and happiness, my little partner."

But Sally, frantic with fear that Tom might go away, got up from the table and without even saying "Good night" to Jerome hurried out to him.

"I hardly expected this," Tom said bitterly, as though he had caught her in some terrible deceit or wrongdoing. "I thought you were working late and that it might please you if I came to call for you. That might be all right, but at that little chop suey place or somewhere and have something to eat and a dance. A lot that will mean to you now."

"Oh Tom, Tom!"—Her voice pleaded for a chance, but he wouldn't stop to hear any explanation.

"A fellow's a fool to work and work and save every cent he earns hoping to make a good home for a girl when all she wants is to gad around with some notorious lounge lizard. How am I to know how long this has been going on?"

Tom stopped only because he seemed to run out of breath and ideas at the same time. "Let me explain. There was a cold finally in Sally's voice that brought Tom to his senses. "Of course, I enjoyed dancing with Jerome. What girl wouldn't be delighted and flattered at the chance. But I didn't do it just because I enjoyed it. I did it because it was a favor to the management of the hotel. You've said yourself that I owed them a great deal."

Sally had led him into a little writing-room off the lobby where they could argue undisturbed by the averted glances of passersby, and there Tom subsided into a chair and just stared moodily at the floor.

"Oh, can't you understand, Tom? Nobody means anything to me but you. This is just a pleasant adventure and you are my whole life. I wouldn't have done it if I had known how angry you would feel, but they needed someone in such a hurry and Jerome had danced with me and said I could—"

"Tom jumped to his feet. "So he had danced with you, had he? I suppose that was some other woman when I thought you were working late. Only one man that I particularly asked you not to associate with, and out of the whole, wide world you pick him to go dancing with!"

Sally prayed inwardly that she could keep from flying off in a temper and saying things that she would regret afterward. She must keep cool, she must. Their whole future depended on it.

"I must go upstairs," she told him, "to change into my own clothes, and when I come back I hope that you will have thought things over and looked at the situation a little more sanely. Oh, I can't bear to have anything come between us," she sobbed suddenly, her voice breaking in spite of her efforts to speak coolly.

A smile of tenderness illumined Tom's face. "I'm sorry I spoke so harshly, dearest," he said. "Run along and get into your own things and we'll go. I was so happy over having good news to tell you that I couldn't stand it when I came in and found you so happy with that man. No, I won't tell you what it was until you come back."

Just as Sally was leaving her room upstairs she got a note from Jerome telling her that his car was at the door waiting to take her home and that the hotel wanted to make a present to her of the hat and slippers and evening frock she had worn.

But at the door of Jerome's car Tom drew back. "You're not going home in that car," he said sternly and decisively. "You are coming with me. The soon-to-be Mrs. Tom Porter is going to be blown to a taxi cab tonight."

Sally gasped with amazement; such extravagance was unprecedented. "Yes; all our troubles are over I guess, Sally. I sold the Chapin place and we can afford to get married now. I will get a big commission. You can quit your job and we'll never have anything to quarrel over again."

The whole world looked more bright and beautiful to Sally at that moment than it ever had before.

V—WEDDING BELLS

ALL the next morning Sally tried to summon up nerve enough to tell the manager that she was leaving in two weeks to get married.

VIOLET DARE

I can't understand you."

But the hotel manager was more discerning. "I can't tell you how we're going to miss you around here, Miss Lee," he said smiling at her regretfully. "And just remember, if you ever need a job again, our feelings are going to be hurt if you don't come straight to us. Better drop in to see us anyway."

And as she went back to her desk, her slim figure surprisingly chiseled in her simple black dress, she wondered if she wouldn't miss the excitement of the hotel when she settled down into a home of her own.

Sally wasn't worrying about that. She was too eager and excited over preparations for the wedding. Every day on the way home from work she bought some little thing for their apartment they had found far up in the Bronx. Little treasures they were from the ten-cent store, a can opener, a dish mop, all sorts of utensils. And when Tom was not too tired at the end of the day, she always wanted to ride up there on the subway and hang the new bit of equipment in place.

It was the night before they were to be married and Tom's sister and her husband accompanied them on their last casual visit to their new home.

"Don't want to appear to criticize," Emily said to Sally wistfully. "But I think you're a little overdone in the kitchen, but all that is awfully extravagant. In the few months we've been married I've learned that you can't waste even pennies."

Sally burst out laughing impetuously. "But buying those things was such fun! And anyway, I earned the money. When I get to living on Tom's I will be more careful."

Emily looked doubtful, but Sally wouldn't argue because she didn't want any cloud to mar this perfect occasion. To a Fifth Avenue florist or a veteran best man at society weddings Sally's nuptials might have left something to be desired, but to her it was a rapturous occasion. She wondered as they drove down Fifth Avenue—Emily had suggested taking a bus, but Tom to Sally's relief had insisted on doing everything right—wondered just how it happened that the stores weren't closed and decorated with flags on such a gala day. Then suddenly remembering what the occasion was she laughed.

"Happy, sweetheart?" Tom asked as they circled around the church to the side door which led to the minister's house. "Perfectly," she nodded. "Oh, we are going to be awfully happy, aren't we? And with all her heart she promised to love, honor and obey."

"I only disappointment was when she found that Emily and Jack were going to ride home with them. Of course, they were all going to Emily's to luncheon—what the etiquette books called a wedding breakfast even if it occurred at one o'clock—but Sally had romantic visions of the bride and bridegroom being from the ceremony alone, feeling from the ceremony alone, all going together. It would be so foolish for them to go to the expense of two cabs, she had explained, especially as they all wanted to arrive home together."

It was late afternoon before Tom and Sally climbed the stairs to their own little apartment. Tenderly she put the corsage of violets he had given her into a vase of water; thrilling at the new-found intimacy she hung her coat and his in the hall closet.

At the door Tom clasped her in his arms and impetuously brushed her hair, her cheeks, her neck with his lips. Drawing her down to his lap in the one big easy chair the apartment boasted, he whispered endearments to her.

"I'm so happy to have my little girl all to myself," he exclaimed. "She won't ever have to go to an office and take dictation again. Never have to meet a lot of strangers. You've got a home of your own now, darling, and a husband who adores you."

But even though she loved the deep tenderness of his voice and cloried in every word of his love-making, Sally began to wonder just what she would find to do all the time that he was away at work.

VI—FOR RICHER? FOR POORER!

SALLY flew at her housework with more enthusiasm than she had ever given to her morning's mail and by ten-thirty the little apartment was spick and span and shining.

"I could get some silk and make some inside drapes for the living-room," she decided, walking from one

"Anybody would think you were giving up your childhood, sweetheart, to see you mooning over that desk," Janet Stewart observed. "Instead of giving up a lot of hard work to be supported by an adoring husband."

"I don't understand you," she called, as Emily tolled up the stairs lugging a heavy leather shopping bag. "I was just dying for company. What's all that?"

"A new cook book and groceries to play with," Emily announced gaily, dumping them on the living-room table and sinking in a chair. "Thought it might be fun for us to make our dessert together. There is the most marvelous recipe for prune whip here—"

Sally's spirits fell. "But we don't eat dessert. I don't want to get fat and Tom doesn't like sweet things. Never mind. Come on let's make it. Anything for something to do!"

"Why Sally, what a way to talk!" Emily was honestly shocked. "Haven't you plenty to do just making a home for your husband?"

"No, I haven't!" Sally retorted crossly. "I get all my housework done by this time and then I haven't a thing to do. I can't fix up the apartment any more until I have some money to spend. I've polished the furniture and until I'm afraid of forks and spoons and knives and wearing them out. What on earth do women do with all of their time?"

"Why Sally!" Emily was speechless for a moment. "Anyone would think you weren't happily married!" Sally settled back in her chair and tried to remember that it wasn't always a good idea to tell everything she thought. There should be a motto card hanging in every home, she reflected, reminding the human race that they were given two ears and one mouth for a very good reason. But boredom and time hanging heavy on her hands had made her reckless.

"Of course I'm happy and I'm as crazy about Tom as I ever was. But I'm still young and strong and ambitious, and about seven hours of every day are utterly wasted so far as I am concerned. After Tom goes in the morning I can manage to keep busy for about four hours and then there is absolutely nothing to do until five o'clock when I start getting dinner. I used to start setting the table about one o'clock in the afternoon—but that didn't take long. And yesterday I made vegetable soup just because I gave me a lot of things to cut up in little pieces. And that didn't give me much to talk about when Tom came home."

"I'm sure I am getting to be the most awful bore," Tom said and used to have so much to talk about and now I've told him how I've missed him all day and asked him what he has been doing, there just doesn't seem to be anything else to say. We're going to get a radio as soon as we save a little money. We haven't even been to a movie for a week, we're trying so hard to save."

"I should think I never go anywhere and I don't want to. I'm so happy having a home of my own at last that all I want to do is play around there. It takes Jack and me simply hours to wash the dinner dishes."

Emily started picking up her bundles and getting ready to go. She couldn't understand Sally any more. Why she actually seemed to regret not being a working girl any more.

Sally sat there for a long time, staring ahead of her and gradually feeling a little bit ashamed of her outburst. Of course, she was happy. Only it was a little bit hard ever to have any passes to the movies or tickets to the theater, and if any of the other things her job used to give her that made so many good times for her and Tom.

She didn't want Tom to find her in this mood so she hurriedly rushed to her closet when she saw the hands of the clock approaching five, put on her most becoming bungalow apron, set the table started dinner, and when Tom arrived she was vigorously dusting the living-room. She had been busy all day, and she had been busy all day.

But after their greetings were over and they had sat down to dinner, she couldn't keep up the deception any longer.

"Isn't there some kind of work I could do at home?" she asked him plaintively. "Copying manuscripts or something like that. I could rent a typewriter, put an ad in the paper, and then I'd have something to do all day."

She regretted having spoken when she saw how crestfallen Tom was. "My little wife, work!" he said. "I should say not. I just want you to have a good time."

room to the other in the tiny apartment, looking for something to do. But a few minutes figuring convinced her that she would do well to buy food for the remainder of the week with the money she had.

She stood at the window looking out and wondering what all the other women who lived on that street were doing and was delighted to see Emily just turning the corner.

"Oh, I am so glad to see you," she called, as Emily tolled up the stairs lugging a heavy leather shopping bag. "I was just dying for company. What's all that?"

she hadn't given this new life of hers a fair trial before asking to be allowed to do the things she had been accustomed to.

Rapidly she reviewed all the things she might do—things other wives did. She would make the living-room curtains, but that would have to be postponed until after the fifteenth of the month, when Tom got paid. She would go calling—but all the people she knew were at work and wouldn't like even a momentary interruption. She would take long walks—hikes out in the country, perhaps—but the only shoes she had were pumps, her patent leather and her satin ones, and she couldn't afford to get those all stretched and worn even if they were comfortable enough to walk in, which they weren't.

Finally she decided that the best thing to do was to spend her spare time improving her mind. She couldn't join the circulating library just yet; that cost a dollar, and it was a quarter every time you exchanged a book. But she could go to the Public Library and on the way home she could walk up Madison Avenue and look in the shop windows. That didn't cost anything. Sally dressed with as much care as though she had been going to a party. Her best silk stockings, the little hat she had worn that day she danced with Jerome, her best lace collar and cuff set.

"There," she said to her reflection approvingly, "doesn't it seem nice for you not to look tired and harassed and like a poor working girl?" But the reflection seemed to say something back about there being more satisfaction in happily-earned weariness than in rest at the price of boredom.

The subway was only half-filled; much nicer, she reflected than in the rush hours morning and night, and she was quite light-hearted and gay by the time she reached the library. There she wandered past shelf after shelf of books before she found any that interested her particularly. But finally clutching "The Art of the Dance" she took it and started to walk up the avenue looking in the windows.

Turning into Madison Avenue she felt a new scattering rain drops and feared for fear of ruining the only presentable hat she had, she dodged into the nearest doorway—her own old hotel, the scene of many happy memories.

Just inside the door she heard a familiar voice say, "Hello. I wondered if I was never to see my little friend again."

She looked up and saw Jerome as handsome and sleek as ever smiling at her. "How nice it is to see you again. We have all missed you around here. But I suppose a married woman is too busy to think about her old friends."

She glowed with pleasure at the warmth of his greeting and smiled as he glanced approvingly at the title of her book. "You're not too busy to come in for a cup of tea and a dance?" he asked, and Sally's heart pounded as he took her arm and guided her toward the palm room where laughter and the tinkle of china mingled with the crooning strains of the orchestra. What would Tom think of her!

She was deliciously happy, yielding herself to the

TOLEDO SATISFIED WITH 1925 BUSINESS

Toledo, O., Jan. 2.—Toledo business on the whole is well satisfied with 1925. Bank debits will reach approximately $2,500,000,000 for the year, an increase of 12 per cent over 1924, it was said.

The Willys-Overland plant has had the most prosperous year in its history, officials said. Prosperity at the Overland was passed on to subsidiary plants and industries supplying the Overland with parts and equipment.

A barometer of the good industrial condition of the last year is to be found in the power demand on the Toledo Edison Company. This utility produced more current than in any other year by millions of kilowatt hours, figures disclosed.

Building operations exceeded those of 1924 by $1,000,000. Employment above 25,000 on the weekly payrolls of fifty-one plants, and reached a high mark of 32,000 weekly.

RABBIT SEASON IS ENDED ON FRIDAY

Greene County nimrods who take the field without being equipped with 1925 hunting licenses, run the risk of arrest by game wardens, it was warned.

The open season for rabbit hunting ended Friday until next November.

The 1926 license sale has been proceeding briskly at the clerk's office in the Court House.

PROSECUTOR TO ASK MURDER INDICTMENT AS GRAND JURY MEETS

Indictment for murder in the first degree against Robert H. Turner, colored, Wilmington Pike, confessed slayer of his brother-in-law, Ulysses Deatherage, 25, colored, November 9, will be asked of the January grand jury by Prosecutor J. Carl Marshall when the jury convenes in Common Pleas Court Monday morning for consideration of cases on the criminal docket.

Turner is being held in the County Jail.

Grand jury will also be called upon to consider evidence Monday against Sidney Cornelius, constable of Bath Twp., and his two sons, Grant and Otto, charged in six affidavits filed by Marshal W. A. Schneider, Osborn, with carrying concealed weapons, assault and pointing firearms election day, November 3.

A number of charges have grown out of alleged trouble between the constable and marshal election day. Marshal Schneider, accused by Cornelius with threatening to assault and resisting an officer, was recently acquitted of the second charge and the first was then dismissed.

The marshal retaliated by bringing charges against the Cornelius family. A suit for $5,000 damages, filed by Schneider against Cornelius is also awaiting trial in Common Pleas Court.

No other cases of importance will be considered by the grand jury. January petit jury convenes Tuesday morning for civil cases.

Several years ago D. W. Griffith met a little girl who loved to dance and decided to make her into a movie actress. The little girl, Carol Dempster, is now a grown up young lady but she's still appearing in the productions of the man who discovered her. Her new picture is "That Royle Girl."

Health Hints by the Father of Physical Culture

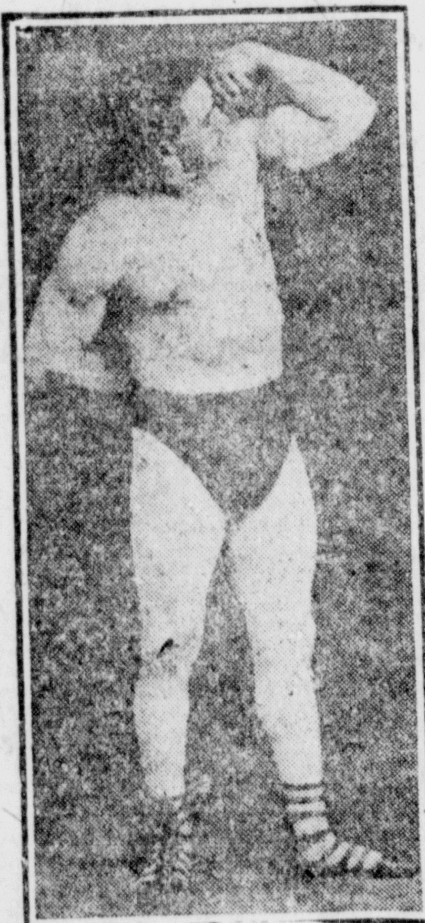

Water, by virtue of its cleansing properties, will in itself cure many diseases. Indeed, this is one of the most important curative agents known. Bathing is a duty and should be a pleasure. It stands on a par with pure air and exercise as a means for the preservation of health or the recovery of health lost. The right kind of bathing, pure air, and daily exercise will ward off most of the ills to which human beings are subject.

The skin contains over three million perspiration tubules and many hundred thousand oil glands. It is the duty of these pores to carry off the impurities of the body, and in this respect the skin has a function similar to that of the kidneys. If the pores of the skin fully acted their part, kidney diseases would be far more infrequent. Clogged pores are the most prolific source of blood and skin diseases. If the skin were painted over with varnish or tar, thus hermetically sealing the pores, death would ensue in short order. Cleanliness, therefore is an everyday duty. In addition to being a glandular organ the skin is a nervous organ, being filled with little elevations containing nerve endings, which are organs of sensation. As such it exerts a great influence on the general health. Being a nervous organ, the skin is susceptible to shocks which depress or stimulate the entire system. This is one explanation of the tonic value of cold-water baths, and also of the depressing effect of a hot-water bath.

Free perspiration is absolutely necessary to health. Perspiration means excretion of the liquid commonly called sweat, which contains various substances including sodium chloride, various fatty acids, neutral fats and cholesterol from the tissue. If the pores are clogged and one does not perspire freely, a warm bath should be taken once a week, or a Turkish bath somewhat less frequently. Persons with weak hearts should take hot baths with extreme caution.

The effect of the hot water is to cause the blood to desert the surface of the body, producing a congestion of the capillary system, which constitutes a strain on the heart. Its effect is modified, of course, in those who are accustomed to taking hot baths several times a week, as use of the system adapts it to the effect.

300 HURT WHEN STAND FALLS; 1 DEAD THREE KILLED IN GRADE CROSSING TRAGEDY

VICTIMS RIDING IN AUTO TRUCK STRUCK BY PASSENGER TRAIN

Blood Transfusion Used In Effort To Save Life

Cleveland, O., Jan. 2.—A blood transfusion was made today in an effort to save the life of Verna Wintle, 16, who was injured in a grade crossing crash near here yesterday in which three persons were killed and two others injured.

The dead: Charles Wintle, 35; Charles Miller, 24 and Mrs. Matilda Miller, 53, Charles' mother.

Tom Wintle, a Cleveland fireman and brother of Verna gave his blood today in an attempt to save Verna's life.

James Miller, 54, husband of Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Bessie Wintle, 60, step-mother of Charles and Verna were injured.

The victims were en route to the Wintle home for dinner when an Erie train struck the truck in which they were riding. The Millers only recently came to this country from England.

A number of buildings cut off the vision of the left approach to the crossing.

In another accident, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Mathews and son, Trevitt miraculously escaped death when their automobile was struck and dragged 200 feet by a Lake Shore electric train.

LIMA SCHOOLS WILL BE CLOSED MONDAY

Lima, O., Jan. 2.—The public schools here will not open Monday because of poor financial conditions in the city, it was announced today.

Whether the schools will open again this year depends upon the pending decision of the appellate court early next week, in the city-county mandamus suit.

Both high schools, have sustained losses said to exceed $2,000 caused by the bursting of water-pipes. The intense cold and the lack of funds to keep fires were held responsible, it was said.

That the county courthouse will close and the entire county government come to a standstill because of financial conditions was predicted in some circles.

FOUR MEET VIOLENT DEATHS ON HOLIDAY

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 2.—Four deaths, two of them suicides were recorded in Cincinnati over New Year's day.

After writing a note to a girl who had rejected him Julius Earl Brown, 20, killed himself with a shot gun.

Loneliness resulting from the death of her father was held responsible for the suicide of Mrs. Mamie Stumps, 41, who inhaled gas fumes.

Jefferson Mau, 42, fell to his death from a fire escape at the Longview Hospital for feeble-minded here while attempting to escape.

Shirley Lewis, 32, was killed when a passenger train struck his automobile at a grade crossing. The car was hurled a hundred feet.

GENERAL HART IS CALLED BY DEATH

Washington, Jan. 2.—Major General William H. Hart, quartermaster general of the United States Army died here this morning at Walter Reed hospital.

Hart's death followed a relapse after a major operation for stomach trouble performed five weeks ago.

LEAPS FROM WINDOW AS FIRE BREAKS OUT

Cleveland, Jan. 2.—Panic stricken when fire broke out in her home early today, Mrs. Charles Lung, 56, fell from a second story window and was perhaps fatally injured.

Mrs. Lung's three daughters, who were trapped on the second floor by the flames and smoke, were carried to safety by firemen. The house was destroyed.

Little hope is held for Mrs. Lung's recovery.

CARDINAL BETTER

Brussels, Jan. 2.—The condition of Cardinal Mercier who was operated on a few days ago for ulcer of the stomach, was reported today to be slightly improved.

Renounced Throne For Love

Legation Denies Action Caused For Political Reasons—
Reported Love For Morganatic Wife Caused Him
To Spurn Princess Helen.

Berlin, Jan. 2.—Love of a beautiful woman and not the intrigues of the Rumanian court, are behind the renunciation by Rumanian Crown Prince Carol of his rights to succeed to his country's throne, according to the Rumanian legation today.

While European capitals buzzed with rumors that political intrigue had unseated Carol, the legation told the United Press flatly the renunciation was "not political."

Instead it was stated that love had led him to give up the privilege of one day ruling with Princess Helen on the throne now held by Ferdinand and Marie.

The statement seemed to put an end to reports that the impetuous officer-prince had been deposed through intrigues of Premier Bratianu, his political enemy whom hitherto Queen Marie has supported or that linked his name in the Rumanian "aviation scandal" had caused him to step down.

At the same time the legation's claim appeared to give substance to the reports that the young man had been seeking life and gaiety on the continent in the company of a beautiful woman—though the multiplicity and contradictory nature of these reports made it a riddle whether the "intimate love affair" was with his morganatic wife, Zizi Lambrouni, with the wife of a Rumanian officer or in the company of other women, all of whom were named.

Bucharest, Jan. 2.—Rumors were current here today that Crown Prince Carol, intends after asking his renunciation as evidence of "martyrdom" by the Bratianu regime, to start a coup of his own. If he succeeds in winning sufficient support for the martyrdom it was claimed, he will set up his own government, ousting his aged father, King Ferdinand.

It is further reported that in renouncing his throne rights, Carol demanded a large money allowance and a divorce from Princess Helen whom he is reported never really to have loved.

The crown council has decided that in event of the King's death before Prince Michael, is of age, Prince Nicolai, will be made regent.

The crown prince has promised to remain away from Rumania for six years, "unless your majesty orders otherwise" (This phrase perhaps indicates the renunciation was not altogether voluntary.)

ULTRA VIOLET RAYS VISIBLE TO INSECTS SCIENTISTS LEARN

Power Used as Guide To
Flowers—Say Straight
Lines Curved

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 2.—Ultra violet rays invisible to human eyes are visible to the eyes of certain insects. These insects are guided to certain flowers by the fact that these flowers reflect ultra-violet light just as all flowers reflect ordinary light. The phenomenon, one of the most interesting brought to light recently, is being studied by a group of scientists under the general direction of Dr. Frank Lutz, of the American Museum of Natural History.

This fact was revealed here today at the closing session of the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science by Dr. Vernon Kellogg, director of the National Research Council.

Dr. Kellogg, made the announcement to illustrate the importance and the success of co-operative and organized scientific research.

The National Research Council grew out of an advisory council formed during the war for the purpose of organizing and leading direction to large scale scientific projects.

"The fields of science have been expanding to such an extent that successful investigation in the future demands proper organization and co-ordination with different men each attacking the part of a problem which they are best suited to work upon," Dr. Kellogg said.

The statement that all straight lines are really curved and that if prolonged far enough in one direction would come back forming a circle was made by Prof. James Pierpont of Yale University. He bases his statement on the Einstein theory which claims space is warped or curved.

However Dr. Pierpont says that a line would have to be prolonged for eighteen quintillions of miles to complete the circle. Discovery of a new race of prehistoric men in America, was announced by Dr. E. N. Renaud, professor of anthropology at the university of Denver. Prehistoric Indian skulls from the southwestern part of the United States are of two different types corresponding to two distinct cultures, he said.

Again Pledges In
New York

New York, Jan. 2.—Smeared with blue, green and red paint, three elephants frightened back-stage at a theater in which they were performing, ran amuck here last night and brought new forces to the ragged pledges "never again" which revelers had taken only a few hours before.

With a small mob following in their wake, the three pachyderms—Jeannie, Carrie and Baby Joe—smashed a police officer after ignoring the signals of traffic policeman Seltzer, who on-lookers say, wasn't a bit insistent.

Turning into the West 133rd police station the three lumbering animals crashed into a table at which Lieut. George Rennsaler, and a dozen reserves were playing checkers. Exit thirteen policemen.

Before Jeannie, Carrie and Baby Joe could do further damage, George Wilkins, in charge of the animal act arrived and after a few words to the ramping beasts they followed him meekly into the street and back to the theater.

KILLED BY TRUCK
Girard, O., Jan. 2.—Girard's first traffic fatality of the year was recorded here today when J. B. Hollister, Youngstown was killed when his automobile collided with a truck. Edward Thomas, the truck driver was exonerated.

JOE STORK LOSES RACE WITH DEATH IN OHIO

The annual all-Ohio marathon between the spectre of death and Joe Stork, was brought to a close New Year's eve, the winner undetermined but with indications that mortality won by a nose.

Competing in another and equally interesting race were the Benedicts who were believed to have won easily over the divorce courts where thousands of matrimonial barges foundered.

Conscience Drives Killer to Confess

When Binney Carey was murdered in a box car in Newark, N. J., 14 years ago, Edward Johnson (above) was arrested on suspicion, but released because of insufficient evidence. Now Johnson, after a 14-year battle with conscience in the Newark jail, having finally confessed to the crime.

ATLANTIC CROSSED IN SECOND FRACTION IN BROADCAST TEST

Program Received In Maine
and Returned To England

New York, Jan. 2.—Experiment of far reaching importance in attempts to span the world by radio was partially successful last night when music broadcast from Great Britain was picked up here and re-broadcast back across the Atlantic in one thirty-second of a second.

Nine of the largest radio stations in the United States had combined to make the experiment successful. Like wise scientists had gathered at stations in Ceylon, Peru, Brazil, Havana, Japan and the Hawaiian Islands to record details of the test.

The music was from Ciro's and Concert Garden in London, broadcast from station 5XX in Daventry on a 1600 meter wave length. It was received first at Belfast, Me., and sent to the Radio Corporation of America at an Cortlandt Park here on a 70 meter wave and from there to WJZ in Aeolian Hall.

It was then re-broadcast. Soon afterward messages arrived from London saying that while strong static interfered with its clarity the music had been caught there. Eight stations in the United States which had co-operated in the experiment also broadcast the music and messages which poured in from the middle and south-west and Pacific coast indicated the music had been generally heard in those sections.

Word was received from Buenos Aires and Havana that it had been heard there and an unverified message from Paris said the music had been reached there and had been re-broadcast again on a different wave.

PAIR ARRESTED IN PROBE OF MURDER

Cleveland, O., Jan. 2.—A man and woman, whose names were withheld were under arrest here today in connection with the death of George Grzazach, who died a few hours after being found in a yard, unconscious.

Both have confessed, according to the police, that they killed Grzazach when he persisted in forcing his attentions upon the woman.

Grzazach was felled with a heavy wooden instrument and was stabbed, police declared.

NURSE IS SUICIDE

Columbus, Jan. 2.—Miss Marie Anderson, 24, a nurse died here today from the effects of poison swallowed at the home of her brother, H. W. Anderson.

THEN AND NOW Congress 100 Years Ago Today, House

Daniel Webster, representative from Massachusetts, defeated on question of printing petition of Thomas Cooper asking government to refund $400 fine, and interest for violation of sedition law. Webster, in report of judiciary committee opposes printing petition but house votes him down. Calhoun report delayed.

Senate

Debates lifting of duties on wine from the United States to restore trade with wine producing countries. One argument is that it is better to receive wine than currency in exchange for wheat and other products exported by this country because ships in that way are filled both ways.

Amendment to bill requiring public officials to furnish bonds is debated.

VIOLENT DEATHS IN OHIO TAKE 17 LIVES OVER NEW YEAR'S DAY

Suicides, Murders, Fires and Accidents Claim
Heavy Toll.

Seventeen lives were snuffed out in Ohio New Year's day according to a survey conducted by the United Press today. Scores were injured.

Suicides, murders, fires and traffic accidents were the contributory causes.

In Cincinnati, a child, Ruth Knittenberg 4, was burned to death. Two persons committed suicide, one was killed in a grade crossing crash and a fifth fell from a fire-escape while attempting to flee from a hospital for the insane.

At Lorain, a woman shot and killed a man who persisted in forcing his attentions upon her.

One Sandusky man committed suicide. A man was killed in Marion while attempting to flag a car and in Leontonia a prominent citizen shot and killed himself.

Three persons were killed and three hurt, one perhaps fatally when an Erie train struck a truck near Cleveland.

At Warrenville, a farm guard was shot and killed following a party. Two men died in Akron, one from stab wounds and the other the victim of an unidentified assailant, who shot him. A Columbus nurse committed suicide and a little boy fled from burns received while playing about a bonfire.

ISADORA DUNCAN IS SAD AFTER SUICIDE OF POET-HUSBAND

Dancer Says America Will Pay For Its Treatment of Her.

Nice, France, Jan. 2.—If Isadora Duncan, dancer, follows her Russian poet husband, Serge Yessenin in suicide it will be "in protest against the rottenness of the world" she told the United Press in an interview today.

Isadora spoke of Serge's suicide with bitterness.

"America, she said, "will some day pay for its treatment of me. All my life has been spent unselfishly and now the press laughs at my husband's death."

"Serge was a Russian and when Russians drink they break furniture. But show me any great poet, except Goethe, who had no vice. America does not know Serge."

"I was not divorced from him for I was not married to him except under the soviet scheme which is the best and most natural."

"I am a very much maligned woman, but pure of heart. Serge too, was maligned as a Russian poet. I tried to save him from himself. Now the world laughs while I cry."

Serge Yessenin committed suicide a few days ago, leaving a poem written in his own blood.

ISSUE BANK CALLS

Washington, Jan. 2.—Comptroller of the Currency McIntosh today issued a call for the condition of all national banks as of Dec. 31.

CAPTURE WOMEN

London, Jan. 2.—It was reported here today that two American women, missionaries had been kidnapped at Powchow Ane Pi, China and listed as missing three weeks.

CRASH MARS ANNUAL FESTIVAL OF ROSES DURING BIG PARADE

Church Converted Into Hospital For Victims Of Collapse.

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 2.—Death and injury marched in the glittering parade of the 10th annual festival of roses, annual New Year's Day festival of wealth and beauty here.

As a gay holiday crowd watched the miles-long floral pageant, a temporary grand stand, seating about 500 persons sagged, quivered and then folded up like a stack of cards.

More than 300 persons were injured, the exact number being impossible to compute because many went to their homes for treatment.

Mrs. Elsie Borice, 65, died from injuries received in the crash.

Two other fatalities resulted from the spectacle.

Mrs. C. W. Bowden, 51, fainted from excitement and fell from the parapet of a building nearby.

Mrs. Caroline Sherman, 35, died from the shock of seeing the crash of the grand stand.

At least two persons are believed to be critically injured. Among the casualties was Mrs. Montague Glass, wife of the author. Her mother and daughter also were slightly hurt.

Many of the injured came from the middle-west and east.

The collapse of the stand came without warning when the parade was well underway. Supporters of the stand gave way with a groan and a tangled mass of humans was dropped through space. After police and firemen had restored order all manner of conveyances were called out to take the injured to hospitals.

The Pasadena Hospital received about 200 persons and half this number soon was allowed to go home. The Presbyterian Church across the street from the special stands was fitted out as a temporary hospital and 100 or so persons were taken there. After an hour's delay, the parade was permitted to continue. Just as the pageant neared its end a black horse threw its rider and charged through a crowd injuring two men.

MURDER ADMITTED BY WOMAN; STATES MAN ATTEMPTED ATTACK

Former Roomer Is Slain In
Forcing Attentions,
Is Said

Lorain, O., Jan. 2.—Mrs. Elizabeth Major, 25, today admitted killing George Jarzynski, 30, when he broke into her home last night and attempted to attack her.

Fairvody, a former roomer in the Major home, had been ordered out by the husband, Bert Major, three months ago for alleged familiarities with his wife.

At the time Fairvody threatened Major's life and said he would return. Twice within the last two weeks, he has attempted to break into the Major home, the last time firing several shots at the husband, when he opened the door.

The husband, in fear of his life, refused to remain in the house. Mrs. Major was home when Fairvody made his third attempt to break in last night. She shot at the man hitting him twice, once in the temple and once in the back of the head as he attempted to escape.

After the shooting, Mrs. Major summoned police.

She is being held in City Jail. No charge has been drawn against her, as yet.

POLICEMAN KILLS SUSPECT IN TOLEDO

Toledo, O., Jan. 2.—Cyrus Tigemeir, address unknown, was killed and Patrolman Leo Jarzynski was wounded in a pistol battle here early today. Jarzynski said he accosted Tigemeir and an unidentified companion as the two emerged from between two houses. Tigemeir carried a crowbar, according to Jarzynski.

The officer ordered the men to raise their hands. Both fled for an automobile parked nearby, the patrolman said. On Jarzynski's second command, one of the men drew a pistol. The patrolman fired, his first shot going wild. Taking refuge behind a tree, Jarzynski shot again, this time striking Tigemeir whose companion fled.

Tigemeir pitched to the street where Jarzynski, fearing Tigemeir was attempting to jump him, fired two more shots into the man's body.

Police expressed the belief that both Tigemeir and his companion were bandits.

BEGGAR IS KILLED

Marion, O., Jan. 2.—E. E. Perryman, 70, Tulsa, Okla., was killed near here last night, while attempting to flag a traction car. A car in Perryman's pocket indicated he made his living by begging.

XENIA'S 1925 FIRE LOSS THOUGHT GREATEST IN HISTORY OF THE CITY

Xenia's fire toll during 1925 reached far greater proportions than in the preceding year both in number of alarms and total damage, and is believed to be the greatest in the history of the city, according to figures shown in the annual report submitted to city officials by Fire Chief T. B. Claiborne.

Fire loss mounted on $11,475 in 1924 to the high peak of $97,451.40 in 1925, the report shows. The department answered 110 alarms during the past year in comparison with but seventy-four the preceding year. Firemen responded to eighty alarms in 1925 resulting in damage estimated at $8,085.

January led the list of 1925 months in number of alarms answered with fifteen, followed by July with twelve. August was the big fire month of the year in point of loss, nine fires resulting in a loss of $39,340, with a building damage of $24,540 and contents loss of $14,800.

Firemen used 400 1-2 gallons of chemicals during the year to aid in extinguishing blazes, the report shows.

Fires that destroyed the grain elevator and warehouse of the Ervin Milling Co. with all contents January 28; twenty-nine automobiles in the storage room of the Ary Motor Sales Co. March 19, and the combination stable and garage of the Wilson Engineering and Contracting Co. August 17, helped the fire toll to mount to unprecedented heights.

PLAINTIFF GIVEN $700 IN DAMAGE CASE

Jury in Common Pleas Court awarded Jesse Harner, near Spring Valley, $700 damages in his suit for $1,000 against John H. Hanley, 2600 E. Third St., Dayton, Saturday noon. The jury reported at 12 o'clock after deliberating an hour.

The trial was one of the longest of the term, lasting two and one-half days.

Harner brought suit against Hanley for damages to his automobile sustained in an accident at the Yellow Springs and Dayton Pike cross roads August 23 in which a boy, passenger in the defendant's car, lost his life. Defendant was accused of reckless driving.

Attorneys L. T. Marshall and J. Carl Marshall represented the plaintiff.

Personnel of the jury: Geo. H. Eckerle, D. A. Reagan, Geo. B. Earley, H. E. Bales, D. D. Jones, Leonard Flatter, Sallie Watkins, Frank Corry, George W. Glass, J. P. Zell, C. M. Knick and Catherine Hackett.

"NEWS TIP CONTEST" WILL START MONDAY; CONTESTANTS ON TOES

A nose for news is a newspaper term to explain that ability which qualifies a person to know immediately what information is of interest to newspaper readers and to get it in formation complete.

THE EVENING GAZETTE and THE MORNING REPUBLICAN are going to find out how many good "news noses" there are in Greene County when they begin their "News Tip Contest" Monday.

Readers who possess first hand information they believe to be of interest to the newspapers, are asked to call the News Tip Editor, Phone 70, the minute the information comes into their possession.

Trained reporters will gather all the information necessary on the tip to make a news story, which, if it has sufficient merit, will be published in these papers. Tips that supplied the best news stories for these papers during the week will earn their prize awards at the end of the week.

Tips will be judged not only on their value as a news story but on promptness, number of facts contained and attention to detail. Persons who submitted the tip from which the best story of the week was obtained, will receive a $5 prize. Giver of the second best tip will receive a $2.50 prize and the five next prize winners in order will receive two tickets to the Bijou Theater, Green St.

The contest is open to every reader of THE EVENING GAZETTE and THE MORNING REPUBLICAN and is in line with the policies of these papers to give the county complete news coverage insofar as this is humanly possible.

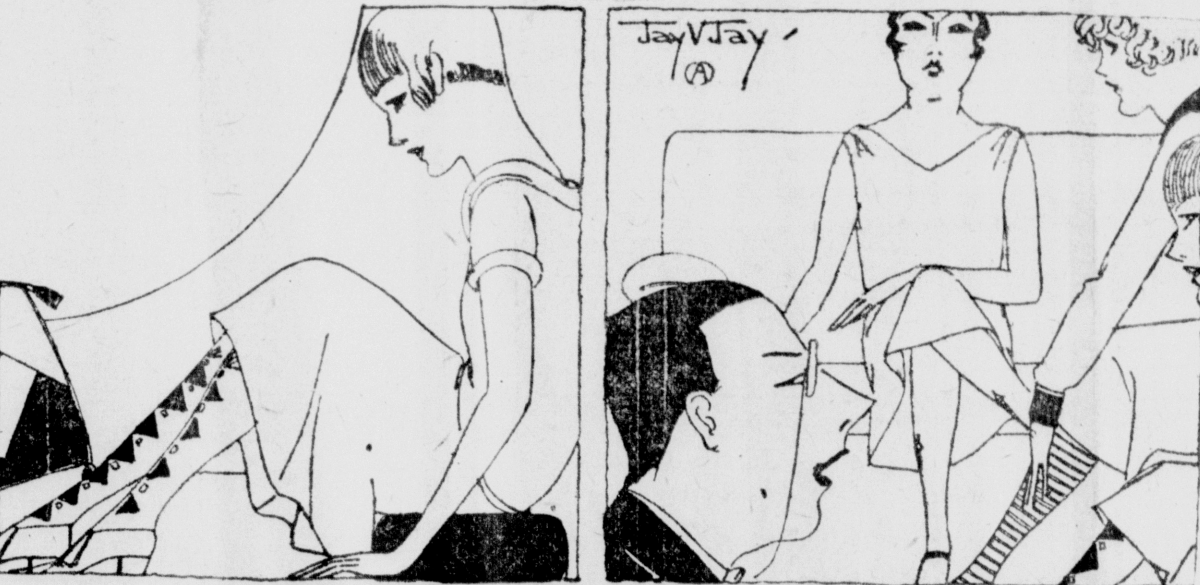

MODISH MITZI—The Goofer Has Good Taste In Hosiery

By JAY V. JAY

Mitzi wears the Goofer's gift. A sheer chiffon hose with French clocks. Adelaide and Polly are admiring them. Where did Mitzi get them—oh, a Christmas gift.

Polly wears a pair of wool sports hose with horizontal stripes. They are what might be conservatively called a "wow." By the way, they were given to Polly by the Goofer for Christmas.

Adelaide wears a pair of wool sports hose, too, with a diamond pattern on them. The Goofer is responsible for this pair, too. It looks as though he was going in pretty heavily on the hosiery market. But the lady at the hosiery counter was very fair—to look upon.

And then the Goofer arrives. How can he help looking at their ankles collectively and separately. "I hear, Mitzi," says the Goofer, "that you have had to postpone announcing the winner of the doll contest for a week." "Yes, and I'm getting my friends to help me," replies Mitzi.

A SCIENTIFIC SANTA.

Under the above heading the New York Times prints the following:

THE POST-CHRISTMAS list of the 'presents' which science has hung beside myriad chimneys, real and figurative, throughout the world is a longer one than usual this year. It has been a prosperous twelvemonth that was inaugurated scientifically by the memorable solar eclipse of January. For perhaps twenty millions of people in the United States and Canada, resident in a strip one hundred miles wide, this total eclipse was the first gift of this sort that has ever been in their visible collection of 'presents,' for there had not been, in parts of that favored zone, any such glorious occultation for more than a century. The memory of the sight of the leaping luminae and of the gorgeous, jeweled corona is one which will not soon fade; but science, undisturbed by this momentary splendor of the skies, gathered in that moment new data for its determinations as to the permanent basic laws of the universe.

"At the other end of the list is a gift which arrived at the last hour, the first report of it appearing in yesterday morning's Times, a gift that seems utterly worthless and insignificant, but that may prove to be a most important bit of evidence in the history of the evolution of life on the face of the earth. It is the fossil scale of a fish that lived, according to the report, in the earliest period of the Paleozoic era, so early that it has been christened by the name 'the dawn fish.' This primitive vertebrate has been found in the company of marine invertebrates and 'plants of a low order,' which compels the inference not only that it was associating with its inferiors in point of development (since it had the beginnings of a backbone, a chorda dorsalis), but also that it existed somewhere between 50,000,000 and 100,000,000 years ago. If this one little fishescale, not larger than a match-head, is what it appears to be, and if the vertebrate creature to which it was once attached was actually in that invertebrate company so long ago, it may prove to be even more precious than the dinosaur egg or the Nebraska tooth illustrating the upward urge of a creation which has its culmination in a being that remembers the waters of the same Cambrian sea as that in which the dawn fish began its vertebrate existence.

But between these two scientific incidents, the moment's eclipse of the sun last January and the announcement yesterday of the discovery in Vermont of this single scale which Professor Howell of Princeton University has found after thirteen years of search in which he has gathered 40,000 or 50,000 fossils, there are other and many scientific events of great human interest and terrestrial consequence: The discovery of the cosmic rays of a force a thousand times greater than the X-ray, new germs, new elements, and in fact 'vast new universes.' Specifically, the mysterious organism that causes sleeping sickness has been identified at last, and that is the first step toward the conquest of this elusive disease. Progress has been made in the study of the causes and treatment of other diseases, notably cancer.

While the parasitic boll weevil is still at large, there is a hopeful prospect that an effective means has been found of alluring this pest, so dreaded in the South, by a manufactured perfume identical with the fragrance of cotton, and so trapping and exterminating it.

"The discovery of the 'penetrating rays' to which the name of an American physicist will doubtless be given, the identification by another American of spiral nebulae, the celestial pinwheels, as 'island universes' at incomprehensibly vast distances, and the recognition of certain comets on their periodic visits have been some of the astronomical gifts. Chemists have done much to assist the science of medicine, but they have also found two of the lost chemical elements, so that now but three remain to be discovered, and have made further progress in the transmutation of one metal into another. The 'rotor ship' that has made its way at sea and the photograph that travels by wire are some of the 'toys' that have been put into Christmas stockings for the first time.

'Altogether, despite the Dayton episode, it has been an eventful, prosperous scientific year, and the gifts, of which the American association for the Advancement of Science, assembling in Kansas City tomorrow, will make a more detailed acknowledgment to the Creator, have been correspondingly generous.

CONTRIBUTED RECIPES

Mrs. A. L.: "I thought other readers might like my Jelly Roll for guest occasions. It calls for nine eggs, but is splendid! Beat the nine egg-yolks with one and one-half cups of granulated sugar, then stir in one and one-half cups of flour which has been previously sifted with one and one-half teaspoons of baking powder. Add one-half teaspoon of vanilla extract and last, fold in the nine stiffly beaten egg-whites, beating all together for three minutes. Spread this batter in a buttered and floured baking pan (mine is 12 inches long and nine inches wide) and bake for 15 or 20 minutes. Have ready a clean wet cloth; lay the cake over it, bottom-side-up, spread quickly with jelly, then roll slowly, starting from the long part of cake. Fold the wet cloth around the roll for a few minutes to keep in shape, then remove and sprinkle the cake with powdered sugar. If too expensive, you may change the recipe to six eggs, one cup of sugar, and one cup of flour."

mixed and sifted with one teaspoon of baking powder."

M. R.: "To make Crumbs on Coffee Cake: My recipe calls for one pound of flour, one-half pound of granulated sugar, and ground cinnamon to suit individual taste. Mix dry, then pour over it one-half pound of melted butter. Brush the coffee bread with beaten egg before putting this crumb mixture on it. This recipe makes enough for a large cake."

Mrs. W. J.: "The home woman can get the same results on the top of her coffee bread as professional baker if she first spreads a generous amount of melted or softened butter on top of the coffee bread and then sprinkles on the mixed sugar, flour and cinnamon (according to the recipe)."

Mrs. L. E. S.: "To make crumbs for coffee bread, mix one-fourth pound of butter, melted, with about four tablespoons of flour and one tablespoon of sugar. Too much sugar makes hard crumbs. Flavor with one teaspoon of ground cinnamon. After mixing, take up the mixture with clean hands, roll between the palms until it crumbles, then spread on cake, and bake. Sprinkle with powdered sugar."

Just Folks

BY EDGAR A. GUEST

THE SALESMAN COURAGEOUS

He came in as a salesman, head erect he said to me:

"I am selling here a product which I think you'd like to see.

It's a handy thing for men folk, it's a useful thing for wives.

It's a clever new invention made for sharpening carving knives."

And I paid to him a dollar without giving it much thought.

But I've learned some things about him since that article I bought.

He sold me on the merits of the thing he had to sell.

Never let me guess that morning what a story he could tell; I thought him somewhat better than the common run of men.

But the burden of his sorrow wasn't even hinted then.

We were just two busy mortals working out our little lives.

I a writer, he a salesman, of a thing for sharpening knives.

Of the losses he had suffered, not a word he spoke to me.

He came to talk on business, not to ask for sympathy.

He was down through grim misfortune, as I later came to learn.

But was fighting for existence till the wheel of luck should turn.

And was just too game to whimper any sad and sorry tale.

On the merits of his product he would make or lose a sale.

So I hail that fellow's courage and I mark him as a man.

One too big to ask for business on the common beggar's plan.

No apology he offered for the thing he had to sell.

He would not affect my judgment by the sorrows he could tell;

And I give this illustration of one brave man I have met.

Who would not display his heart-aches for the business he might get.

When problems arise on your farm and you are in doubt just what course to pursue, just what remedy to use, do you ever think of your county library? There you will find many books, each written by an expert in some line of study. Ages of farm experience and a few generations of agricultural research have given us a vast store of practical knowledge on tilling the soil and raising crops and animals. This knowledge is scattered through many agricultural journals and encyclopedias. The important facts on which the most successful farming is based are brought together in these books. These books are written for farmers and should make a popular appeal to all men engaged in farming. Notable books are:

"Types and Breeds of Farm Animals," by Chas. S. Plumb, Prof. of Animal Husbandry in the College of Agriculture, of Ohio State University.

"Successful Farming," by Frank D. Gardner, Prof. of Agronomy in the Penn State College and Experiment Station, with chapters on special subjects by thirty-six noted authorities.

"Soil Fertility and Permanent Agriculture," by Cyril C. Hopkins,

Prof. of Agronomy in the University of Illinois.

"Insect Pests of Farm, Garden and Orchard," by E. Dwight Sanderson, Dean of the College of Agriculture, University of West Virginia.

"Principles and Practice of Poultry Culture," by John H. Robinson, Editor of "Farm Poultry."

"American Horticultural Manual," by J. L. Budd, late Prof. of Horticulture in the Iowa State College of Agriculture and N. E. Hansen, Prof. in the South Dakota College of Agriculture.

"Gardening with Brains," by Henry T. Finck.

THIS BODY

There is nothing so strange in this world of strange things as this body. I watch the bodies of all people as they move here and there. I study and observe attitudes. I like to speculate as to what is going on in each body I see. That wonderful mind, so superior to so many, is the helm directing all the activities of each body.

But with a difference in environment, however, amongst these bodies.

I often like to stand and study moving bodies as they surge forward in a crowd. Which are the important ones as regards human progress and worth? Who among the unknown will rise and become perhaps the honored and highly applauded?

What an instrument of power—this body!

How much it means to keep it clean and full of vibrant health, so that it may respond with all its finest gifts to that which is asked or demanded of it under all conditions.

What affection we have for many bodies. How good it is to see some noble men or women walk along the street or come into our presence at times. How strongly some personalities dominate their bodies and make of them such noble works.

I like the idea of beautiful and lovely clothes if they bring out the best in the wearer.

We should have an inward reverence for these bodies of ours. They are the vehicle of our ambitions. They take us into experiences. They harbor our mysteries.

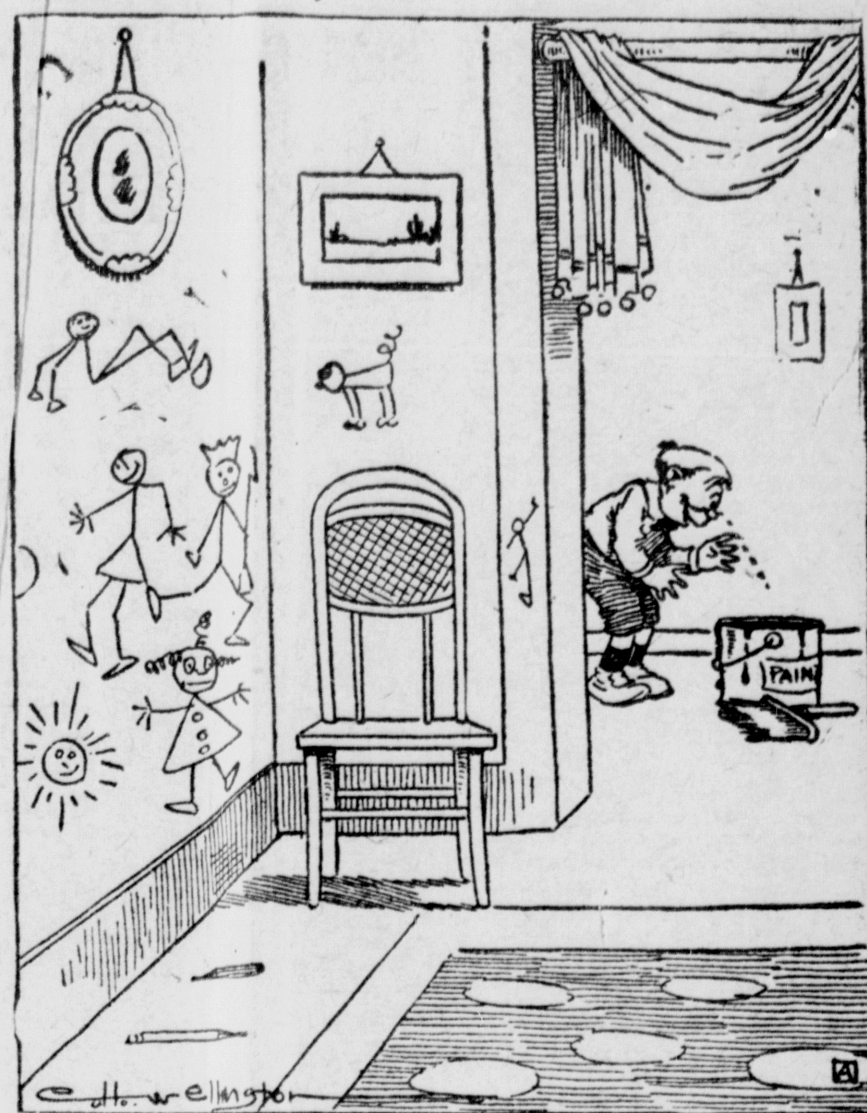

We were created "in His image."

THE WORST IS YET TO COME

OHIO AT WORK

OHIO, LARGE COKE MAKER

Value of Output in One Year
Second Only to Pennsylvania

The production of coke is another large and essential industry in which Ohio is one of the leading states.

Information gathered and reported by the U. S. government at Washington shows that second only to Pennsylvania, Ohio in one year produces more coke than any other state in the Union.

Pennsylvania's coke production in one year is valued, in a government industrial survey, at $73,000,000. Ohio's output has a value of $64,000,000. Indiana, the third state, has a production worth $60,000,000 in one year, and Alabama's figure is $40,000,000.

Coke production goes hand in hand with the iron and steel industry, in which Ohio also is one of the leading states. However, large quantities of coke also are used in other industrial plants. The by-products of coke ovens are the basis of the growing American dye industry.

The Ohio coke industry pays wages and salaries of more than six million dollars in a year, and employs between 3,000 and 4,000 persons.

BUDGET DAY WILL BE HELD THRIFT WEEK

Dayton, O., Jan. 2—Budget Day, January 19, will be one of the biggest days of Thrift Week, January 19-23, according to Miss Edith Patterson, home budget specialist of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Co-operation of merchants in the observance of Budget Day will be enlisted by the Federation Miss Patterson said.

She pointed out that women spend 85 cents out of every dollar in the pay envelopes of the United States, and that 80 cents out of each 85 are spent over the counters of retail stores.

For this reason, she said, merchants should be especially interested in using this opportunity to educate their customers to spend more wisely.

OHIO FARM BUREAU MEETS IN FEBRUARY

Columbus, O., Jan. 2—The annual meeting of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation will be held here February 1-2 in connection with Farmers' Week at Ohio State University.

At this meeting general policies for the coming year will be adopted. At present there is no new outstanding question or problem confronting the organization officials declared.

New York, Jan. 2.—Four of the major golf titles changed hands during a most successful season in 1925 and the other four championships remained in the same hands.

Bobby Jones, perhaps the most outstanding American golfer of the season, won the national amateur championship for the second successive year and forced Willie McFarlane into a playoff in the national open.

In beating Jones in the "open," McFarlane succeeded Cyril Walker as the American champion.

Miss Glenna Collett, 1922 American woman champion, staged one of the most pleasing comebacks of the season and won back the title held in 1924 by Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd.

Jim Barnes contributed further to American prestige in foreign competition when he won the classic British open championship and replaced Walter Hagen, the brilliant American, who carried off the 1924 honors.

Robert Harris became a new champion when he succeeded E. W. E. Holderness as the British amateur champion.

Walter Hagen, considered by many qualified critics to be the greatest money player in the world, retained his championship by winning the P. G. A. title.

Miss Joyce Wethered, who was declared by Genna Collett as the finest woman golfer in the world, retained the British woman's title that she won in 1924.

Because of the heavy expenses involved there were no Walker Cup matches in 1925, but the series between the British and American amateur teams are to be resumed in 1926.

Radical improvement in the college game was observed and the class has been lifted to such a prominent place by the number and ability of the competitors that it had almost a major national rating.

Fred Lamprecht, of Tulane, also a star player on the varsity eleven, won the championship and replaced Dexter Cummings, the 1923 and 1924 champion. Lamprecht was almost as good in the gridiron as he was on the links.

One of the features of the 1925 intercollegiate rowing season was the end of the Washington regime at Pennepoke and the continuation of Yale domination on the Thames.

Another Navy crew, almost equal to the eight that won the Olympic championship in 1924 and two titles on the Hudson, defeated Washington in the Poughkeepsie intercollegiate regatta after a drive that nearly pulled their hearts out to the very finish.

With the new coaching system of Ed Leader, swept through another great season and gave Harvard a rowing lesson on the Thames in their annual four-mile race.

Increase of interest in hockey, both amateur and professional, was also noticed late in the year.

Tex Rickard drew a crowd of 17,000 including many of New York's fashionables, into his new Garden to see his New York team open the home season of the National League schedule.

The possibility - that Rickard's arena offers of seating 17,000 to 20,000 for a match stimulated the sport in both the amateur and professional classes.

Yale adopted the Rickard Garden as its home rink and about twenty-five other college games have been scheduled for the season.

The amateur players also revived a league that passed out of existence years ago because of the lack of suitable rinks.

Rickard's influence, felt in the presence of a $5,000,000 structure that can provide sufficient space for anything but an automobile race, was felt late in the year, and it is no doubt will boom every class of sport in the coming years.

ALABAMA DEFEATS WASHINGTON WITH LAST MINUTE RALLY

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 2.—Alabama University, champions of the south, became one of the ranking football teams of the season with a thrilling 20 to 19 victory over Washington, Pacific Coast champions in the Rose Bowl yesterday.

A spirited rally in the third period when the Washington defense was altered by a passing, running and kicking attack gave Alabama three touchdowns and a well earned victory.

Washington was weakened in the second period when George Wilson, All-American half back was injured and had to be carried from the field.

The morale of the team was further lowered when Pooley Hubert, the little Alabama quarterback threw a world's record forward pass of 80 yards and followed later with one for 40 yards.

The 65-yard pass wiped out the books the 57 yard heave of Brick Muller, in 1921, and the 62 yard heave of John Levi, the Haskell Indian star in 1924.

Johnny Brown, Alabama back, led the attack in the third period and scored two touchdowns in rapid succession and the third was scored by Hubert while Buckler added two points after touchdown.

Washington looked like a certain winner when the first half ended with a touchdown in each quarter by Cole and Guttersen.

THREE ARE SLIGHTLY HURT IN ACCIDENT

Unidentified occupants of an automobile bearing a 1926 license number believed to have been issued in Dayton, were bruised and slightly hurt when their auto side-swiped an approaching car near Zimmerman on the Dayton and Xenia Pike Thursday night and overturned in a ditch on the south side of the road. The machine was damaged.

The auto was occupied by three boys and three girls and no one was seriously hurt. Their names were not learned.

Officials of the Greene County Auto Club and Dayton Auto Club are investigating the accident. The auto, a Chevrolet sedan, bore license number 422,458. It was being driven toward Dayton.

Grieve and Harness also handled the sale of "The Home Beautiful" N. Detroit St., which was purchased by Mrs. Flora Conklin, recently.

SUES SCHOOL BOARD ON TRANSPORTATION BILL; COURT NEWS

Walter Hess has brought suit against the board of education of Beaver Creek Twp., Rural School District for $170, alleging the board refused to pay his bill for that amount for transportation of his two children, Harold and Marion Hess, to school during the school year of 1924-25.

The plaintiff claims the children were allowed to attend Xenia Central High School which is but three miles away, instead of the Beaver school, more than four miles distant, during the period. F. L. Johnson is attorney for the plaintiff.

ALLEGED DUE ON ACCOUNT
Claiming there is a balance due of $700 from the defendant for installing a heating plant in her residence, John North, plumber, has filed suit in Common Pleas Court against Blanche Garwood, Marcus Shoup and F. L. Johnson are attorneys for the plaintiff.

WILLIAM COPE DIES HERE ON SATURDAY

William Cope, Xenia painter, died at his home, 18 Race St., Saturday morning at 9:50 o'clock. He has been afflicted for the past three years with paralysis and another attack two weeks ago resulted in his death.

Mr. Cope resided in Xenia a number of years and was well known. He is survived by three sons, Ernest and George, at home, and Carl, of this city.

The body was removed to the Neel Undertaking Parlor, W. Main St., where friends can call anytime Sunday afternoon.

Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at 1:30 at Neel's with interment in Woodland Cemetery.

DECEMBER POSTAL RECEIPTS INCREASE

Postal receipts at the Xenia Post Office during December 1925, augmented by the annual Christmas deluge of mail matter, showed a substantial increase over the figures for the corresponding month in 1924, according to the monthly report prepared by Postmaster C. S. Frazer.

Receipts during December, 1925, amounted to $6,300 as compared with receipts during the same month the preceding year totalling $6,015, an increase of $285.

FAMILY DAY TO BE OBSERVED SUNDAY

Sunday, January 3, will be celebrated as family day at the Presbyterian Church in Yellow Springs. It is announced.

Westminster Bible class will have charge of the morning service at 10:30 a. m. when the Rev. Carl White will deliver a sermon on the subject "New Year Purposes."

Special music will be furnished by a choir of young women. Mrs. J. H. Hawkins, Xenia, and Mrs. Allyn Swinnerton, Yellow Springs, will assist in the program with special numbers. All families in Yellow Springs and vicinity without a church home are invited to attend.

TOLEDO SATISFIED WITH 1925 BUSINESS

Toledo, O., Jan. 2.—Toledo business on the whole is well satisfied with 1925. Bank debits will reach approximately $2,500,000,000 for the year, an increase of 12 per cent over 1925, it was said.

The Willys-Overland plant has had the most prosperous year in its history, officials said. Prosperity at the Overland was passed on to subsidiary plants and industries supplying the Overland with parts and equipment.

A barometer of the good industrial condition of the last year is to be found in the power demand on the Toledo Edison Company. This utility produced more current than in any other year by millions of kilowatt hours, figures disclosed.

Building operations exceeded those of 1924 by $1,000,000. Employment above 25,000 on the weekly payrolls of fifty-one plants, and reached a high mark of 32,000 weekly.

RABBIT SEASON IS ENDED ON FRIDAY

Greene County nimrods who take the field without being equipped with 1926 hunting licenses, run the risk of arrest by game wardens, it is warned.

The open season for rabbit hunting ended Friday until next November.

The 1926 license sale has been proceeding briskly at the clerk's office in the Court House.

TOLEDO SATISFIED WITH 1925 BUSINESS

Toledo, O., Jan. 2.—Toledo business on the whole is well satisfied with 1925. Bank debits will reach approximately $2,500,000,000 for the year, an increase of 12 per cent over 1925, it was said.

The Willys-Overland plant has had the most prosperous year in its history, officials said. Prosperity at the Overland was passed on to subsidiary plants and industries supplying the Overland with parts and equipment.

A barometer of the good industrial condition of the last year is to be found in the power demand on the Toledo Edison Company. This utility produced more current than in any other year by millions of kilowatt hours, figures disclosed.

Building operations exceeded those of 1924 by $1,000,000. Employment above 25,000 on the weekly payrolls of fifty-one plants, and reached a high mark of 32,000 weekly.

RABBIT SEASON IS ENDED ON FRIDAY

Greene County nimrods who take the field without being equipped with 1926 hunting licenses, run the risk of arrest by game wardens, it is warned.

The open season for rabbit hunting ended Friday until next November.

The 1926 license sale has been proceeding briskly at the clerk's office in the Court House.

PROSECUTOR TO ASK MURDER INDICTMENT AS GRAND JURY MEETS

Indictment for murder in the first degree against Robert H. Turner, colored, Wilmington, Pike, confessed slayer of his brother-in-law, Elmer Deatherage, 35, colored, November 9, will be asked of the January grand jury by Prosecutor J. Carl Marshall when the jury convenes in Common Pleas Court Monday morning for consideration of cases on the criminal docket.

Turner is being held in the County Jail.

Grand jury will also be called upon to consider evidence Monday against Sidney Cornelius, constable of Bath Twp., and his two sons, Grant and Otto, charged in six affidavits filed by Marshal W. A. Schneider, Osborn, with carrying concealed weapons, assault and pointing firearms election day, November 3.

A number of charges have grown out of alleged trouble between the constable and marshal election day. Marshal Schneider, accused by Cornelius with threatening to assault and resisting an officer, was recently acquitted of the second charge and the first was then dismissed.

The marshal retaliated by bringing charges against the Cornelius family. A suit for $5,000 damages, filed by Schneider against Cornelius is also awaiting trial in Common Pleas Court.

No other cases of importance will be considered by the grand jury. January petit jury convenes Tuesday morning for civil cases.

Several years ago D. W. Griffith met a little girl who loved to dance and decided to make her into a movie actress. The little girl, Carol Dempster, is now a grown up young lady but she's still appearing in the productions of the man who discovered her. Her new picture is "That Royle Girl."

Health Hints by the Father of Physical Culture

Water, by virtue of its cleansing properties, will in itself cure many diseases. Indeed, this is one of the most important curative agents known. Bathing is a duty and should be a pleasure. It stands on a par with pure air and exercise as a means for the preservation of health or the recovery of health lost. The right kind of bathing, pure air, and daily exercise will ward off most of the ills to which human beings are subject.

The skin contains over three million perspiration tubules and many hundred thousand oil glands. It is the duty of these pores to carry off the impurities of the body, and in this respect the skin has a function similar to that of the kidneys. If the pores of the skin fully acted their part, kidney diseases would be far more infrequent. Clogged pores are the most prolific source of blood and skin diseases. If the skin were painted over with varnish or tar, thus hermetically sealing the pores, death would ensue in short order. Cleanliness, therefore, is an everyday duty. In addition to being a glandular organ the skin is a nervous organ, being filled with little elevations containing nerve endings, which are organs of sensation. As such it exerts a great influence on the general health. Being a nervous organ, the skin is susceptible to shocks which depress or stimulate the entire system. This is one explanation of the tonic value of cold-water baths, and also of the depressing effect of a hot-water bath.

Free perspiration is absolutely necessary to health. Perspiration means excretion of the liquid commonly called sweat, which contains various substances including sodium chloride, various fatty acids, neutral fats and cholesterol from the tissue. If the pores are clogged and one does not perspire freely, a warm bath should be taken once a week, or a Turkish bath somewhat less frequently. Persons with weak hearts should take hot baths with extreme caution.

The effect of the hot water is to raise the blood to desert the surface of the body, producing a congestion of the capillary system, which constitutes a strain on the heart. Its effect is modified, of course, in those who are accustomed to taking hot baths several times a week. A warm bath will soothe the system and...
